(Dave Dornias Photo)

"Short Stories I'll Never Forget" will be the theme of the book review by City Librarian Samuel Chandler when he inaugurates the Friends of the Daly City Library 1977-78 book review series on Thursday, Sept. 15,

10 a.m., in the community room, Serramonte Library. Shown discussing short stories are Chandler and The Friends Book Review chairman Eileen Winter. The public is invited to attend free of charge.

He Fights Dastardly Deeds

By TERRY DAVENPORT

What's this? The villainous Water Bandit is raising the city's water pressure, so that every home will have a leaky faucet!

To the rescue dashes Capt. Hydro, a forthright young man with protruding chin and wavy hair, whose mission is to save as many drops of water as possible.

After a quick dive into a laundromat dryer to change into leotards and cape, our hero succeeds in felling the evil Water Bandit's dastardly deeds once again.

These two lively cartoon characters will be introduced to fourth, fifth and sixth graders in Millbrae and Pacifica this fall, if funding can be ironed out in time.

The state Department of Water Resources is paying partially for the Capt. Hydro program with money from the Environmental Protection Program, which is funded by persons who buy personalized license plates.

The department is encouraging water districts statewide to kick in an additional 30 cents per child to complete the funding for their local schools.

Don Engdahl of the DWR said his department sent out 1,500 letters to water districts describing the program. He hopes they will introduce it to 750,000 school children.

Some water districts are balking at the expense, arguing that they're making less money than usual in this water conscious year. But the department hopes they will absorb the cost for the greater public good.

Capt. Hydro was borrowed from the East Bay Municipal Utility District, which designed him as part of Project Water to teach water conservation in the kindergarten through eighth grades.

The program has been endorsed by all county superintendents of schools and by state Supt. Wilson Riles.

Capt. Hydro is a hero of mediocre intelligence who constantly pursues the masked, mustachioed Water Bandit in cartoon strip adventures. Capt. Hydro cannot fly, so he takes the bus.

Along the way, Capt. Hydro asks for the help of readers and ad-libs explanations of the water cycle and sources of city water supplies. He encourages students to learn how to read a water meter, do an inventory of water use in their homes, and build a rain gauge.

The state Department of Water Resources has written regional supplements to the program. The Bay Area booklet names specific water sources for San Mateo County, suggests local field trips and lists people who are qualified to speak on water conservation.

One of the most popular parts of the program is a hidden names word puzzle in which students attempt to locate the names of local water sources, such as "Crystal Springs Reservoir."

Teachers will receive instruction on the Capt. Hydro program at workshops around the state throughout next month.

Marvin Morganti, assistant superintendent for Laguna Salada, is confident that his district will begin the program within a few months after he reviews its grade level suitability with the district's curriculum council.

"Some of the projects might be too difficult for the students, particularly the fourth graders. I don't know how to read a water meter — do you?" Morganti said.

Dr. Rufus Clapp, assistant superintendent of Millbrae Elementary Schools, said he's waiting to hear reactions from teachers about Capt. Hydro.

Funding of the program in Millbrae will be up to the individual schools, said See CAPT. HYDRO, Page 2

City-Owned Garbage Station Gets Backing

By NANCY STANCILL
A Daly City-owned, Daly City Scavenger company-operated Mussel Rock Garbage Transfer Station won the unanimous approval of the Daly City City Council Monday night.

The council's approval of the concept as recommended by City Manager David Rowe is expected to be discussed Wednesday at 5:30 p.m. when representatives from Daly City and Pacifica hold a second Joint Garbage Disposal Committee meeting.

The meeting will be in the Daly City council chambers.

Though it was approaching 1 a.m. when the transfer station agenda item came up for discussion, there were three residents there to voice objections to Rowe's concept.

Harold Calder, a longtime foe of the city's garbage operations in connection with Daly City Scavenger Co., urged the council to consider hiring a firm to make an "independent study" of whether it's cheaper to operate a Mussel Rock station or use the San Francisco transfer facility.

Calder maintained the San Francisco facility might be the wiser course.

Resident Conrad Pavellas urged more city control, and said of the Daly City Scavenger Co., "Do we need another company of this type?"

Resident George Kirchubel said the transfer station should be financed in the manner of Daly City's Civic Center — through a non-profit corporation which issues bonds.

Rowe said, however, that it took the civic center corporation two years to issue the bonds for construction and Daly City has only until Feb. 15, 1978, to complete the transfer facility.

The Mussel Rock facility will be used by Daly City and Pacifica for compacting garbage and transferring it to large trucks for hauling to the county dump at Ox Mountain.

Rowe's concept for transfer station development proposes that the scavenger company form a separate corporation, borrow funds using a 25-year loan to construct the building, and deed the building and land to the city.

The city would provide for repayment of all costs for building and land and would approve a budget for operation of the station by the corporation.

Rowe said the contract also could include a fixed management incentive fee, the details of which would be worked out.

In other business, the council:

- Set Oct. 11 as a public hearing date to discuss eminent domain proceedings against Art Sofas, owner of the business property at 8601 Mission Street that the city wishes to acquire as the site of its proposed multipurpose center.

Several residents objected to the concept of the proceedings, which council members said is necessary to ensure that the city meets federal deadlines for utilizing acquisition monies.

- Set Oct. 11 for the council hearing to consider the San Mateo County Convention and Visitors Bureau request for Daly City to increase its hotel-motel tax and contribution.

- Decided it would hold another public hearing Oct. 25 to discuss proposed street sweeping regulations for Mission Street that will ban cars on one side of the street each day from 5 to 7 a.m.

Rehab Program Controversy

Two Quit Committee

Daly City's residential rehabilitation program got off to a shaky start Monday.

In the course of an emotional five-hour meeting, the Daly City City Council approved eight rehabilitation actions, designed to put the government-financed, low-cost loan program for housing repair into action.

The emotion was evident when two of the long-time rehabilitation advocates, Conrad Pavellas and Ernie Pezzola, resigned in anger from the rehabilitation advisory committee.

Pavellas and Pezzola, both directors of the Original Daly City Protective Association, in recent months had sharply criticized city officials and the council for what they termed were deliberate delays in setting up the program.

By contrast, the council came in for equally strong criticism from Mission Street attorney Hartley Appleton for hasty action on rehabilitation. Appleton said he and other Mission Street property owners fear their property will be depreciated by the moves.

More than 100 Daly City residents crowded into the City Hall council chambers for the hearing. Most stayed a few hours and left as the meeting dragged on.

The audience apparently was composed primarily of residents who had received last week a required mailing by the city to inform them of the hearing. Most sat silently and listened to detailed explanations of the rehabilitation plans.

Eugene Holt, one of the few residents who spoke, wanted to know how the rehabilitation area, composed of two and a half census tracts around Mission Street, was chosen.

"How do we know it is deteriorated when assessments are up?" he asked.

Community Development Director Don Fleming cited a number of studies including several in connection with redevelopment efforts, that noted the change in the neighborhood from owner-occupied to renter's dwellings. He pointed out other standards of appearance.

But Appleton said such designations as "depressed and deteriorating" will serve only to "beat down prices" of land owned by many residents.

Besides declaring the area occupied by 4,600 dwelling units as the target for rehabilitation efforts, the council passed resolutions which provide for the following:

- A general description of the rehabilitation objectives.

- A city proposal for public improvements, including two parks, street improvements and beautification and storm sewer and water system improvements.

- Interim rules and regulations to guide the first processing of rehabilitation loans. The council will hold a special meeting Sept. 18 at 8 p.m. to consider possible action.

Holy Man Visits Daly City Council

The Daly City Council Chambers took on an exotic air Monday as an Indian holy man and his retinue paid an unexpected visit.

Actually, Babu Mahandev Singh Ji was invited to appear at the council meeting by "Lord Mayor" Albert Teglia but his presence was unexpected to everyone else.

Daly City residents, out in full force to listen to arguments on residential rehabilitation and garbage transfer stations, gawked more than a little at the graceful man in the white turban and spotless robes advanced toward the speaker's lectern.

He addressed the Daly City City Council, which listened respectfully as he spoke at length in his native tongue.

Finally, Dr. I Raj, president of the Sant Nirankari Mission in California, and Dr. O. P. Pillandou, chief priest, explained that their colorful leader was urging "love of mankind, love of God and purity" for all Daly City.

Babu Ji then presented the "Lord Mayor" with a white prayer shawl and was whisked off by his following, taking most of the evening's glamour with him.

AW, THAT'S CUTE

YoYo the Yogurt Clown is touched by the scene in the ring below — a full grown leopard licks the animal trainer's face like a kitten at a Yogurt Matinee of the circus at the Cow Palace. YoYo is flanked by two pretty young ladies — Christy Martin, left, of Colma, and Judy Belotz, Daly City. The two were among a group of 60 deaf and hearing-impaired youngsters and adults who were treated to an afternoon at the circus by the California Milk Advisory Board. YoYo the Yogurt Clown (Debra Patsel), a 20-year-old special education student at San Francisco State who is proficient at sign language for the deaf, entertained at a pre-circus party and backstage tour. The group was organized by Friends of the Deaf, a Bay Area non-profit organization which provides assistance and a summer camp program to hearing-impaired children.

Clapp, who said the local water district has not approached them with any offer to pay for the program. "I'd be a little bit embarrassed to have them pick up the cost in a year like this," Clapp added.

Clapp said he believes students are quite knowledgeable about water conservation efforts and will have no trouble understanding Capt. Hydro.

This summer students at Taylor School helped make signs for the city's water trucks that said "Reclaimed Water," to avoid public wrath as the trucks watered shrubs.

Had Capt. Hydro known, he would have burst with pride.

Reassignments At City Hall

David Rowe, Daly City city manager, has announced the temporary assignment of Sgt. Ed Lyons to the city manager's office, and the restructuring of assignments for Anne Dissing, administrative secretary.

Mrs. Dissing has been a city employee since June of 1962. She started as personnel secretary and became administrative secretary in the city manager's office in 1965. From January to July, 1972, Mrs. Dissing was temporarily assigned to the Personnel Office as administrative assistant. Mrs. Dissing and her husband, Paul, have lived in Daly City since 1960. They have one son who is a budget analyst for the Navy and lives in San Diego.

Mrs. Dissing will assume more administrative assistant duties and will be an administrative assistant to the City Council. Her other duties will include correspondence control; records management; review of time reports and employee performance evaluations.

Sgt. Lyons will be assigned from the Police Department to the city manager's office for a six-month period. Sgt. Lyons has worked with the Daly City Police Department for eight years. He spent two years as a patrolman, three years as the Department Training Officer, and three years as a police sergeant. Prior to his employment in Daly City, Lyons was with the Army Reserve as a captain. He has completed the majority of his required units for a BA degree in Business Management. Lyons is married and has three children.

Lyons' assignments will include contract administration, property management, Clean Community Committee, Preferential Parking Committee, Traffic Committee, and special projects.

HYDRO TO THE RESCUE

Captain Hydro will be introduced to Millbrae and Pacifica school children this fall, if funding can be worked out, to help children realize necessary water conservation measures.

Many Your Own Problems, Council Advises Merchants

By JANET PARKER

Disgruntled "Downtown" San Bruno merchants were told flatly Monday night that many of their business district problems are their own fault, but the City Council nonetheless agreed to set up a committee to study the problems.

Merchant Vico Ivancich presented the council with a petition, signed by 99 merchants, essentially asking the city to undo the results of a $600,000 remodeling project — $290,000 of that paid for by the merchants over the next 15 years.

They are asking that the city change parking on San Mateo Avenue back to diagonal stalls and that southbound traffic on the avenue be allowed to once again flow north and south into El Camino Real.

Since the revitalization project, motorists who reach the end of San Mateo Avenue can travel only north on to El Camino Real.

"We know now an error was made," Ivancich told the council. "If San Mateo Avenue remains as it is, business will not improve."

The avenue lost 60 parking places in the change from parallel to diagonal parking, he said. And Ivancich added, no provision was made for SamTrans bus stops.

He also said City Engineer Leo Van Dusen should have recognized the potential problems when the design first was presented four years ago. He and other merchants claim that the plans actually were changed after the merchants gave their approval — a point city officials have adamantly denied.

Ivancich asked for a survey of public opinion on the downtown problem and formation of a committee to include two city officials, two merchants and a local newspaper reporter as a "tie breaker."

Another merchant, Nick Barbarotto, said the project "wasn't anything near what we anticipated."

He pointed out, "My complaint is I feel we haven't had true cooperation with the city."

Councilman Tony Governale expressed surprise at accusations that the city engineer was responsible for design errors. After all, he said, the design was presented to merchants in many city meetings.

Governale and Councilwoman Marge Kozowski voted for the remodeling, to which the city contributed $250,000. The remaining $350,000 came from the city's water department funds since sewer system repairs were necessary in the process.

"From day one, this city has attempted to everything financially possible,"

Governale related. "We're not out here as enemies of the merchant."

In fact, he said, sometimes the council is accused of favoring the desires of business leaders over the pocketbooks of taxpayers.

Mrs. Kozowski said it's entirely inaccurate that the problems are the city's responsibility. The city had the project designed and redesigned to satisfy the merchants, she said.

"Quite frankly, gentlemen, I don't know what else you expect the city to do," she said.

Councilman John Barnard, who opposed the project in the beginning, stopped just short of saying, "I told you so."

"You screwed yourselves up by eliminating a lot of the parking," Barnard said. "You haven't seen the worst of it yet." He added that he was booed when he called the proposed project "dumb" in 1974.

At first, Barnard moved to form a committee of two merchants, two Traffic and Safety Committee members and two council members. But in anger, he withdrew the motion, after statements by Barbarotto insinuating the committee would be a "stacked deck."

A second proposal by Governale for a committee of one Traffic and Safety Committee member, two merchants, two council members and a sixth person chosen by the merchants was approved unanimously.

But Governale erupted at statements by merchant Fred Diaz that the completed project was different than the project on paper.

Governale insisted that the merchants had asked that through traffic to El Camino Real be eliminated. Merchants had complained that motorists were making a left turn from San Bruno Avenue onto San Mateo Avenue in the late afternoon as a short-cut route to El Camino Real. Shoppers couldn't even pull out of their parking places because of the bumper-to-bumper short-cut traffic, he said.

In addition, he said, the planters now being criticized by the merchants were placed there to slow down traffic on the avenue, another concern of the merchants.

"I'm not going to stand here and listen to merchant after merchant condemn that design," he said. "Most of you people don't realize what that street looked like before it was redesigned."

City Manager Gerald Minford also pointed out that merchants reviewed the final design "down to the last planter."

"I would hate to even count the number of meetings we've had," he said. The city just didn't have the money for a more involved project, he pointed out.

"It's just not true that the city didn't do what they said they would do," he related.

One merchant, George Mendenhall, pointed out that to change the whole project now would be a lot more expensive than anyone wants. The best thing to do is sit down and rationally study all aspects of the project and find an affordable solution.

He added one parting comment that was applauded by the audience. "I signed a petition but I didn't criticize anybody," he said.

ble revisions to the regulations.

• City authority to acquire and hold deeds of trust and mortgages.

• Establishment of a rehabilitation loan committee of three persons to act on each application.

• Establishment of a rehabilitation advisory committee to guide the progress.

• Hiring of the Connerle consulting firm to process the first loans and train a full-time employee to take charge of the program.

The questions surrounding the advisory committee and the hiring of a consultant firm appeared to spark the resignations of Pezzola and Pavellas.

The two had charged that City Atty. Albert Polonsky's suggestion for staggering the seven-member committee's terms for one-, two- and three-year periods was an attempt to remove them from the committee.

Rehabilitation Chairman and Mayor Pro Tem William Schumacher suggested that council approve four-year terms for all seven appointees.

Schumacher said the committee had wanted to be appointed for the life of the program, but had agreed to the four-year term as a compromise.

But Mayor Albert Teglia and Councilman Tony Giammona had objected that continuity of the committee would be broken if all members were up for appointment at the same time.

On the matter of the consultant, Fleming noted that the rehabilitation committee had met before the council session and had taken a secret vote on their recommendation for consultant.

Polonsky inquired whether the vote had been made public before the close of the meeting. When he was told that it had not been done, he ruled that to reveal the vote would be a possible violation of the Brown Freedom of Information Act.

He requested that the rehabilitation committee members individually tell their preferences at the meeting, rather than reveal the secret committee vote. Pezzola and Pavellas declined to do so and told council of their intent to resign.

Pavellas later said the committee had been forced to make a "hurried decision" on the consultant and that he was also angry that the council had declined to pass a resolution or offer a concrete date to act on the Marks-Foran loan program.

Pavellas had pointed out that the Monday resolutions were designed to start up the Housing and Community Development Act (HCDA) monies for rehabilitation use.

Charging that residents need assurance that the bonding program will go forward, Pavellas asked council to get it in writing from the city attorney and city-hired bond counsel.

But Giammona, responding to the implied lack of trust in Polonsky, said, "If the city attorney said it's okay to go ahead, it's okay with me."

Giammona's comment won a light smattering of audience applause.

Rodeo Sets Its Date

The 33rd annual Grand National Rodeo, Horse Show and Livestock Exposition will be staged Oct. 28 through Nov. 6 at the Cow Palace, it was announced by Grand National Manager Darrel Chapman.

Since its inception in 1941, the Grand National has always offered a unique three-shows-in-one program. Thousands of top-quality livestock, plus the largest horse show west of the Mississippi (3,000 entries), combine with the nation's sixth-largest rodeo to fill the busy 10-day slate of events. This year, a record $400,000 will be offered in premium and prize money.

Fourteen arena performances are scheduled beginning Friday evening, Oct. 28, and concluding Sunday evening, Nov. 6. The 10 evening performances are set for 8 p.m. (except Sundays at 7), and the four weekend afternoon shows will begin at 2 p.m.

San Bruno Pursues Postal Substation

Possible location of a Postal Service substation in a downtown city-owned building is being studied by the San Bruno City Council.

The city staff Monday night was told to prepare a report on the feasibility of contracting with the U.S. Postal Service for a substation in the old firehouse on San Mateo Avenue.

The suggestion by Councilman Dick Griffith, who is employed by the Postal Service, came on the day the new San Bruno Post Office opened.

Many San Bruno residents — particularly senior citizens — are complaining that the location of the new Post Office on Huntington Avenue near Tanforan Shopping Center is too remote. The new station is only a few yards from the South San Francisco border in a far northeastern corner of San Bruno.

The Postal Service has been trying to locate a substation — a small facility run by a merchant for dispensing postal items — downtown on San Mateo Avenue. However, bids to date have been unsatisfactory, according to postal officials.

Another attempt is being made and bids will be opened again Friday. Postal officials claim that San Bruno does not generate enough postal revenue to justify a so-called "classified substation" — a facility run by employees of the Postal Service.

Griffith, however, said that the city may be able to offer a city-run substation if the bids by merchants again are deemed unacceptable.

Councilman Tony Governale added that the need is "critical."

"The elderly in our community are most hard hit by what's occurred," Governale said.

Ironically, the Western Regional Division of the U.S. Postal Service — covering 13 states — located its headquarters in San Bruno three years ago. The council often has been critical of the federal government's use of that prime piece of Bayhill area property because it exempts the land from property taxation.

A second meeting of the Citizens Action League with San Bruno Postmaster Mildred Burns was scheduled today in the San Bruno Public Library. At last report, no representatives of the Western Regional Division planned to attend.

Buying the containers will enable the center to make more than the $60 per week it currently is earning. The center now must give all profits for newspaper and tin collected to the companies which, in return, supply containers.

Ms. Murawski also intends to add to the center's coffers by using different paper and glass companies, which pay more money for recycled goods. The center's total earnings will be boosted to $100 per week through the changes, she predicts.

But, she does not expect the center to make a profit. "If we ever show a profit, we'll just hire more people and expand the hours," she said.

The center is open Tuesdays and Saturdays, from 10 a.m. to noon. Beginning Oct. 1, it will be open an additional two hours on Saturdays, until 2 p.m.

Ms. Murawski hopes to have the center open for two hours every day beginning in November.

"We're soliciting housewives, senior citizens and students to work at the center," she said. Those interested in working at the center for two hours a day may call her at the center.

The center pays a small wage.

"We like to call ourselves a recycling center and a job training center. We've really got some kids turned onto recycling," she said.

The center requests that items be prepared as follows:

• Newspapers — Tie with string in any size bundles.

• Cardboard — Flatten boxes.

• Tin cans — Take off top and bottom, remove paper label and squash flat.

• Aluminum — Cans, aluminum foil and TV dinner trays may be brought as they are.

• Glass — Remove all metal and corks. The center especially desires non-screw top wine bottles and all gallon wine bottles.

Ms. Murawski asks that people dropping off bottles when the center is closed have them sealed with tape in cardboard boxes.

Pacifica to Hold On To Revenue Sharing

After hearing pleas for funding by five community groups, the Pacifica City Council decided last week to freeze some $750,000 in revenue-sharing funds the city is to receive through 1980.

The council said it was most concerned that there will be enough money in city coffers to pay for a new corporation yard, where city vehicles would be maintained and stored.

No estimates of the cost of the corporation yard can be made until a study is completed. However, the Fassler Avenue site proposed for the yard could be ruled out.

Asst. City Manager Donald Jeffers said the city was given that property for the sole purpose of building a civic center. He said the council directed the city attorney to determine whether a corporation yard would be a proper use of the land.

A litigation session on the yard had been scheduled after the City Council meeting yesterday.

The council has directed the city staff to report back in not more than 120 days on the cost of a corporation yard so that it can decide how much money will be left over to dole out to needy organizations.

The organizations must wait until then to learn whether they will get a piece of the revenue-sharing pie. Those making presentations Wednesday were the Guadalupe Health Center, the Food Advisory Service, Friends to Teen-Age Parents, the Pacifica Arts and Heritage Council, and the Pacifica Little League.

Jeff High Pay Proposal

The Jefferson Union High School District Board of Trustees has accepted without comment a salary proposal from the American Federation of Teachers, Local 1481, that would cost the district from $600,000 to $1 million.

The Board has set a Sept. 20 public hearing on the 1977-78 AFT proposal. Dr. Harold Tonini, assistant district superintendent, estimated the cost of the proposal.

The proposal requests:

- A 10 per cent salary increase for all day school teachers.

- An increase in pay for teachers performing extra duties, from the current $240-$660 to $1,300-$1,500 per year.

- Top salary after 20 years, rather than 41 years of service.

- An increase in adult school salaries from the current level of $10.10-$10.55 to $16-24.

- An increase in home teachers' salaries from the current $7 to $16 per hour.

In other business, the JUHSD board gave final approval to a Family Education Rights and Privacy Act policy governing access to student records.

Supt. James Brien probably will recommend closing several schools in the 15-school Laguna Salada School District when he reports on long-range planning to the school board in December.

Using enrollment statistics for the past five years,

Brien predicts a sharp decline in students attending district schools through 1981.

Airport Grant Accepted

Acceptance of $457,000 in federal money to plan land use around San Francisco International Airport was approved last week by the San Francisco Airports Commission.

The money will be used in a joint study now being directed by representatives of San Mateo and San Francisco counties.

Airports officials said the study will provide detailed information on proper use of properties on and around the airport to assure that the giant airfield and its neighboring communities can survive together.

San Francisco International is one of less than a half-dozen airports across the country for which federal money has been allotted for this purpose, said Airports Director Richard Heath.

Matters to be considered in the planning include impact of noise, air pollution, safety and other matters relating to the airport and its surrounding communities.

The commission voted to accept another $348,000 in federal funds to improve Runway 28-Right.

It awarded an improvement contract of $94,000 to Hodgson Construction Co. of Redwood City, and approved several smaller business items.

The commission objected to paying $60,000 on a professional service agreement for Bank of America to administer revenue bonds, however, and asked airport officers to look into a possible contract change.

In an after-action session, the commissioners heard noise abatement officer Arnold Feener describe the airfield's attempts to cope with noise problems.

The session developed into a public hearing of Peninsula residents and their complaints about airport noise, but no action was taken.

CHICKEN AND DUMPLINGS

3 1/2 to 4 lb. stewing chicken cut into serving pieces. Place cut up chicken on a rack in a heavy kettle, add 4 or 5 cups chicken base or stock, 1 med. size onion, carrot, celery stalk and a sprig of thyme. Cover and simmer gently 3 to 4 hours or until meat begins to loosen from bones. Add more chicken stock if needed. During the last 20 min. of cooking skim off excess fat and add 1 tsp. salt. Now use the following dumpling recipe:

1/4 tsp. bouquet garni beef
1/4 cup milk plus 2 tbs.
1 cup biscuit mix

1/8 tsp. salt
1/2 tsp. parsley
1/4 tsp. sugar

Combine all ingredients except biscuit mix. Mix well and stir into biscuit mix to make a soft dough. Drop spoonfuls onto chicken and replace cover tightly and simmer 20 min. without lifting cover. arrange chicken on a platter, surround with dumplings. Makes 8 dumplings. Serves 4 to 6 people.

FINE ARTS

Chamber Music Series

Beginning Tuesday evening, Sept. 20, a four-part lecture series entitled "The Chamber Music Experience," will be given by Helen Beyer, concert violinist and music director of the San Mateo County Chamber Music Society.

Ms. Beyer, a Foster City resident, holds a masters degree in music and music education from Teachers College, Columbia University, and is noted for her scholarship in the chamber music medium.

Sponsored by the Community Service Office of College of San Mateo, the illustrated lectures are designed to provide a basis for understanding and increasing one's listening pleasure of this intimate art form.

The interested novice, music students and teachers, and subscribers to the concert series can enroll. Subsequent dates will be Oct. 18, Nov. 29 and Jan. 17, from 7 to 10 p.m.

For registration forms and information contact the college or call the Chamber Music Society at 345-0879.

'Dolly' Benefit for ERA

Would Dolly Levi be a backer of ERA?

The League of Women Voters of North San Mateo County has reserved all of the seats at the Spindrift Theater in Pacifica on Sept. 17 for a performance of "Hello Dolly."

All proceeds will go to promote the passage of the Equal Rights Amendment.

Wine will be served during intermission.

Tickets may be ordered from Betty Fleming, Daly City, or Lillian Jaramillo, South San Francisco.

'Shakespeare's People'

Sir Michael Redgrave heads the cast of "Shakespeare's People," a "celebration of Shakespeare in words and music," which will play a two-weeks only engagement at the Geary Theater Sept. 12-24.

The Paul Elliott and Bernard Jay production is presented here by the American Conservatory Theater.

Tickets are on sale daily at A.C.T.'s Geary Theater box office and Northern California agencies.

Adult Musicians Sought

Adult musicians 18 years old and older can attend rehearsals of the Daly City Community Concert Band beginning at 7:15 p.m. Sept. 15 at Westmoor High School, Daly City.

Hank Neiholt directs the band, sponsored by the adult division of the Jefferson Union High School District.

Japanese Festival Set

For the eighth consecutive year, Japanese Americans from all over Northern California will be gathering at San Francisco's Japan Center and Japantown, Post and Buchanan streets, the weekend of Sept. 23-25, to celebrate the arrival of fall Japanese-style with a colorful three-day folk festival.

Aki Matsuri — or Fall Festival — is an outgrowth of the harvest festivals which for hundreds of years played a vital role in the social and cultural life of the Japanese people. The celebration provides the opportunity for Japanese Americans to enjoy the music, dance, arts and sports that are part of their rich cultural heritage and to share this legacy with the larger community.

The festival opens Sept. 23 with a children's program — including origami (the art of paper folding), a judo demonstration, tea ceremony, and films on Japan.

Art Festival Planned

A quarter-million people will experience the creative energy of 1,200 area artists and performers at the 31st Annual San Francisco Art Festival at Civic Center Plaza Sept. 21-25, from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. daily.

On the plaza will be more than a dozen special and educational exhibits, such as Art Grant's "Let It Rain-bow" anti-drought ice sculpture, an inflatable sculpture for dance by John Fricke with the San Francisco Dance Spectrum, and political art from the San Francisco Poster Brigade.

Dancing for Beginners

San Mateo Chapter of Bachelors 'n Bachelorettes Square Dance Club is starting a new beginners class on Fridays from 8 to 10 p.m.

The class is open to new dancers for three weeks, starting Oct. 7. Registration is from 7:30 to 8 p.m. at Laurel School, 316 36th Ave., San Mateo.

Bachelors 'n Bachelorettes Square Dance Club is a non-profit organization with many chapters across the nation. For more information, call 355-5609, 573-1636 or 349-7281.

Groups Want Pacifica Funds

Organizations will request revenue sharing funds from the Pacifica City Council Wednesday at a 7:30 p.m. hearing in the council chamber at the sewage treatment plant.

Scheduled to give presentations are the Guadalupe Health Center, the Food Advisory Service, Friends to Teen-Age Parents and the Pacifica Arts and Heritage Council.

Pacific Telephone Announces Money Refund for Customers

Basic telephone rates will be reduced and refunds made for overcollections for all Pacific Telephone customers, the California Public Utilities Commission has ruled.

The PUC admitted it made an error in calculating its estimate of intrastate revenues for the telephone company in a Dec. 30, 1975 decision which granted PT&T a $65.2 million increase in rates.

As a result, basic telephone rates will be reduced by $7.5 million. It also will result in refunds with interest on the amount of overcollections made by Pacific Telephone since Jan. 5, 1976, when the new rates went into effect.

For local and foreign exchange residence service the reduction will amount to 10 cents per month. For business local and foreign exchange service, the reduction will be five cents per month.

The telephone company was ordered to file new tariffs by Oct. 4 to reflect the rate reduction, with the new rates to become effective five days after filing.

The utility also was required to file a refund plan for the commission's approval within 15 days, with the refunds to be made to each subscriber "in an equal amount."

Basis for the refund will be calculated for the period from Jan. 5, 1976 to the effective date of the prospective rate reduction ordered, the PUC said.

It is estimated that the refund would amount to about $2 per customer. The PUC said "the refund can most equitably be made by means of an adjustment to each subscriber's billing account."

Today's decision came on a rehearing of the December 30, 1975 decision which awarded Pacific Telephone a $65.2 million rate increase, which was appealed by the City of San Diego. The matter was subsequently reopened by the PUC on February 8, 1977 and a hearing held in April.

The Peninsula Symphony Auxiliary will meet today in the Franciscan mobile home of Mrs. Laura Carter for luncheon and entertainment.

Mrs. Fran Gaffigan, the publicity chairman for the auxiliary, notes that the membership is enthused about the Peninsula Symphony's concert schedule, which includes performances by such renowned guests as violinist Albert Markov, Cellist James Kreger, pianist Jean-Philippe Collard and saxophonist Harvey Pittel. Aaron Sten is beginning his 29th season as the conductor.

Following the luncheon and business portion of today's gathering, the guests will be entertained by David Tigner, vocalist, who is studying with Robert McCracken and sings with the San Francisco Opera Chorus.

For information about the concert schedule or about the auxiliary, contact Mrs. Harold B. Ward, 35 Catamaran Lane, Daly City, 94014.

"SHORT STORIES I have Enjoyed" is the theme of Daly City City Librarian Sam Chandler's guest lecture at tomorrow's meeting of the Friends of the Daly City Library.

Mrs. Eileen Kenny, Mrs. Louene Rossina, Mrs. Dorothy Orton and Mrs. Alice Barichievich will be in the Community Room of the Serramonte Library at 10 a.m. to welcome persons attending the meeting.

Following the review of short stories, Chandler and his wife will be the guests of honor at a no-host luncheon in the Little Red House, 1650 Bryant St. in Daly City. Reservations for the luncheon will be accepted by Mrs. Eileen Winter, book review chairman, during the meeting.

THE BALBOA High School Alumni Board of Directors will meet tomorrow at 7:30 p.m. in the home of president Mrs. Emily Sumrall.

In addition to regular business, the meeting also will include discussions of plans for Balboa's "Golden Jubilee" year, 1978. Anyone interested in being a part of this birthday celebration should contact Vickie Hackett or Mrs. Sumrall, 30 Cameo Way, San Francisco.

MARY'S HELP Hospital Guild will meet Friday at 12:30 p.m.

Because of construction problems at the hospital, the guild will meet in St. Andrew's Community Center, Sullivan Avenue at Southgate Avenue.

Members of the board will meet in the hospital's board room, at 10:30 a.m. and the members of the Tray Favor Committee will be working in the cafeteria at the same time.

Members are reminded of the guild's Reno trip, Sept. 30, and that they must pay for their tickets this week.

Members are reminded of the guild's Reno trip, Sept. 30, and that they must pay for their tickets this week.

Mrs. Virginia Stanghellini will accept checks for $27 per person through Saturday. Members, husbands and friends are welcome on this junket.

Previewing Fall, the dessert-fashion show, sponsored by the Daly City Host Lionesses, will be this Saturday in the Westlake Community Center.

Mrs. Virginia Tierney, the president, reports that fashions from the Little Daisy and Woman's World will be featured.

SISTER CECILIA CRONIN, a member of the International Graphoanalysis Society, has begun a special daytime class on "Personality through Handwriting" for localities who haven't been able to attend her night classes.

The new session, which began Monday, meets in the Daly City War Memorial building each Monday at 10 a.m. The course is sponsored by the Jefferson District Community Adult Education department and registration is $2. A special kit is available for an additional $8.

THE NATIONAL Association of Retired Federal Employees (NARFE) will meet on Sept. 20, at 1 p.m. in the Hope Lutheran Church, 55 San Fernando Way, Daly City.

The church is located near Mary's Help Hospital and is easy to locate and reach.

Meetings of the NARFE are open to all retired and about-to-retire federal employees.

MEMBERS OF the Holy Angels Women's Guild met for the first time this semester last Wednesday and members of the new Executive Board greeted returning members, as well as new members, with the announcements of programs for the coming year.

Mrs. Yvonne Bernardo, the president, introduced Mrs. Bonnie Domaratus, vice president; Mrs. Diane Arevalo, treasurer; Mrs. Maryann Torres, recording secretary; Mrs. Shirley Brignoli, corresponding secretary and Mrs. Pat Fonti, the membership chairman.

One of the first major events on the guild's schedule will be a two day "Monte Carlo" celebration, Sept. 30 and Oct. 1.

The "Monte Carlo Nights" are co-sponsored by the Holy Angels Women's Guild and the Men's Club and Bingo, black jack and poker will be among the games to be played in the parish hall, 107 San Pedro Road in Colma.

Prizes are being collected for presentation to winners and tickets to Saturday night's festivities, which will include a buffet, are now on sale.

No tickets are required, according to Mrs. Dianne Leonetti, the publicity chairman, because no buffet is planned for that night.

THE WESTLAKE Catholic Women of Our Lady of Mercy Church are launching their fall program with a "Luncheon is Served" in the parish hall, Sept. 28.

SWERING IN

Broadmoor Police Department members are being sworn in by Daly City Police Chief David Hansen, right. The officers are on a six-month contract with

Monte Carlo Nights

Holy Angels Parish Hall is the site for Monte Carlo Nights Sept. 30 and Oct. 1, from 7 p.m. to midnight.

The hall is at 107 San Pedro Road, Colma.

Co-sponsored by the Holy Angels Women's Guild and Men's Club, this event, a special two nights this year, offers an opportunity to participate in many games of chance such as bingo, blackjack, poker, etc. using script money and winning premiums.

Friday night there is no admission price and hourly door prizes will be awarded.

The $1.50 admission Saturday night includes a delicious buffet at the end of the evening.

Membership Party

Mrs. Hal Stehman, president of the Sisterhood of Congregation B'nai Israel, announces its annual membership party on Sept. 19, at 8 p.m., at the Synagogue, 1575 Annie St., Daly City.

Refreshments will be prepared and served by the Sisterhood Gourmet Cooks and Bakers. The event is open to all Sisterhood members and prospective members. For more information call Mrs. Stehman at 589-8607 or Mrs. Milt Potak, membership chairman, at 992-4186.

First Brunch Slated

The first of a series of monthly brunches will be held at the Temple House, 1575 Annie St., Daly City, on Sept. 25 beginning at 10:30 a.m.

The brunch will be served and prepared by Sisterhood members and will consist of fruit juice, a hot dish, fresh Jewish-type bread and bagels, hot beverages, and home-baked cakes and goodies.

Price of admission is $2 for adults and $1 for children.

Advance reservations and checks for reservations are required. Persons interested can mail reservations and checks to Sisterhood president Renee Stehman, 2231 Valleywood Drive, San Bruno, 94066, phone 589-8607, or membership chairman Debby Potak, 354 El Dorado Drive, Daly City, 94015, phone 992-4186.

Sabbath Services

Sabbath Services will be observed in the Sanctuary of Congregation B'nai Israel, 1575 Annie St., Daly City, on Sept. 16 at 8:30 p.m.

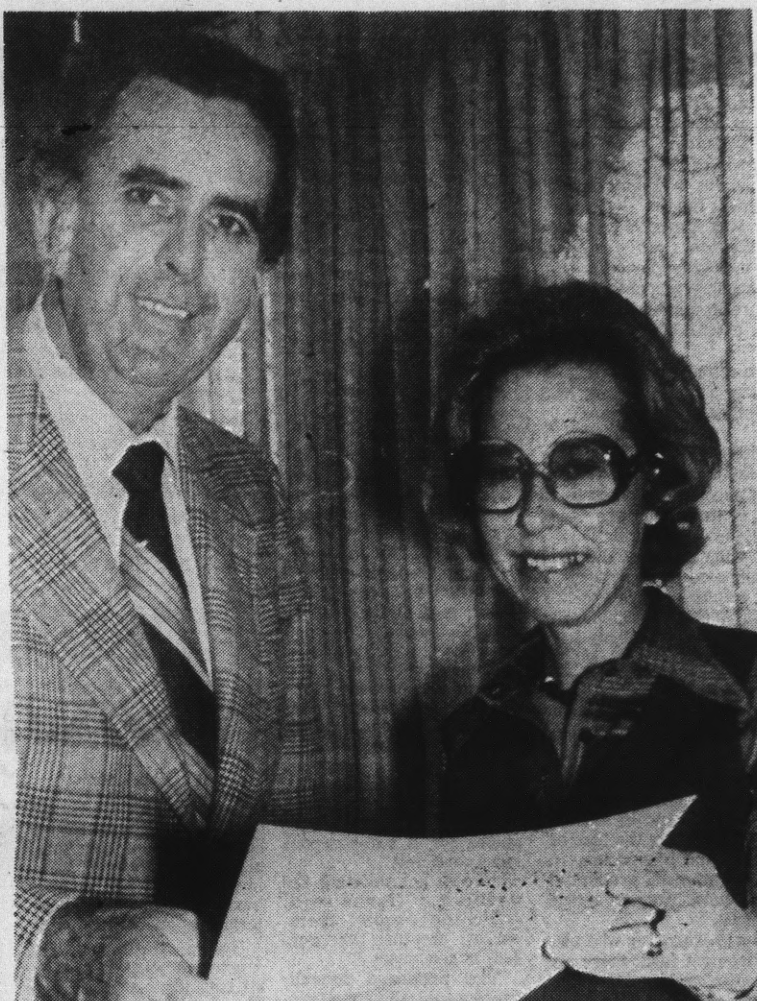

Services will be led by Rabbi Ira Book, assisted by Cantor Salo Blumenthal, who will chant the liturgy.

Rabbi Book's sermon will reflect Shabbat Shurvah — "Sabbath of Repentance."

Meet Changed

For the month of September only the meeting date of the Daly City Parks and Recreation Commission is being changed from the fourth Wednesday of the month to the third Wednesday.

The regular meeting of the Parks and Recreation Commission will be at 7:30 p.m. Sept. 21, at the Council Chambers of City Hall, Daly City.

CONSTITUTION WEEK

Daly City Mayor Albert Teglia presented a proclamation to Doris Colichidas, San Andres Lake Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, proclaiming Sept. 17-23 as "Constitution Week."

The United States should be deeply grateful to their Founding Fathers for the wisdom and foresight they displayed in writing and adoption the Constitution," Teglia said.

his horse and plow has no relevance in today's farming," Heringer said.

Heringer called on Californians from inside and outside of agriculture to learn the facts about the so-called 160-acre limitation.

The Farm Bureau is calling for an extensive series of hearings on the regulations proposed by Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus.

The Farm Bureau chief pointed out that 850,000 acres of irrigated farm land in California are considered excess lands under federal law.

"You are talking about a huge block of farmland that would be cut into small, mostly uneconomic parcels," Heringer said. "Such a revamping of California farm land and its corresponding effect on marketing and the consumer should be carefully weighed before dashing off playing a misguided Robin Hood."

Heringer noted that all areas of the state are affected from Shasta County on the north to Imperial on the south.

"There is nothing secret about the economics of farming in California," Heringer asserted. "The economics are public and we know it takes a large amount of capital and water to make farming practical. It is the cruelest kind of hoax to lead people to believe they can get 160 acres at a raffle and make a living when study after study has shown just the opposite."

Heringer added that nearly all studies which have shown small farms to be feasible have used many assumptions which could easily prove false.

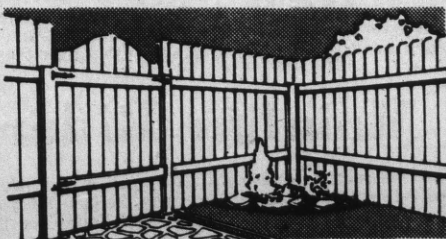

"In the largest district, Westlands, there is an immediate guarantee of about two-acre feet of water a year," Heringer stated. "There are no guarantees that the supply will ever rise as high as three acre-feet. Most high income crops — the crops which would be needed to make a small operation successful — need more than three acre-feet."

Heringer pointed out existing regulations already have made significant gains in getting excess lands into the hands of new owners. He pointed out that in the Westlands Water District the number of landowners has increased 65 per cent since federal water arrived there in 1968. He noted that the farm size has nearly dropped 50 per cent from 4,600 acres (arid non-productive land) before water arrived to 2,400 acres now. Those figures are expected to decrease even faster under existing contracts.

A Ghost Town

The town of Shasta northwest of Redding in northern California was a rich and turbulent gold-booming town of more than ten thousand residents in the early 1850s. Today it is an interesting ghost town being preserved and restored by the state.

Disabled Students Rejoining Classmates

By TERRY DAVENPORT

Channeling children with learning problems back into regular classrooms may be one of the best things to happen in public education, Dr. Antony Lepire told teachers in the Millbrae School District last week.

An assistant professor of special education at San Francisco State University, Lepire explained the effects of Public Law 94-142 and California's master plan in special education.

Both are aimed at upgrading the quality of education for children with handicaps or learning disabilities and are backed by substantial funding. The state has committed $65 million to its master plan and stands to gain an additional $90 million in federal money to implement Public Law 94-142.

The federal law, signed by then-President Gerald Ford, is the largest supplement for handicapped children in history, Lepire said.

Its intention is to provide free public education for all handicapped children aged 5 to 17 by Sept. 1, 1980. The deadline for full compliance for those aged 3 to 21 is two years later. Emphasis will be placed on early identification of problems.

The state master plan aims to teach children with special needs in the least restrictive environment. Instead of being labeled as "mentally retarded" and assigned to a separate classroom, these children will be integrated into regular classes whenever possible.

"It's consoling to know that what was done by schools 20 years ago -- 'abandoning' a child with special needs in a regular class -- is now called 'mainstreaming' and is good," Lepire added.

Teachers have expressed fears that they will be forced to deal with children they are incapable of helping.

Lepire acknowledged those fears, noting that he's heard that the National Education Association and California Teachers Association are considering policy recommendations against mainstreaming.

Compared to other alternatives, Lepire said, mainstreaming is the best way of handling children with special needs.

"The (beneficial) consequences of sending a child to special classes are often offset by the stigma and labels applied to the child," he said.

Labels, he said, mean judgments and invariably create strong reactions. What children with problems need most, he said, is the feeling of belonging.

As an example, he mentioned that in one of his special classes there had been a girl who died. Instead of including her on a memorial page with other students who had died during the school year, the yearbook devoted a separate page to her.

Lepire said the girl's mother bitterly complained to the school that her daughter had been treated as abnormal even after death.

Lepire quoted a study which found that 61 children out of any sample group of 100 are difficult to teach.

Of the 100, he said, 25 will have trouble with academic learning, 15 will have reading problems that no remedial program can correct, 17 will have emotional problems that interfere with behavior, two will be super students, two will be physically handicapped, and the rest will be normal. "It seems that the normal human condition is abnormal," he stated.

In addition, he noted, psychological tests used to determine normalcy have been knocked down by the world's courts as being racially biased.

One result of such tests is that 31 per cent of all pupils in special education programs are black, but only 9 per cent of the student population is black, he said.

Lepire said current programs designed to help children with learning problems are only scratching the surface.

In many cases, parents are not given adequate notice of the options available to their children. Lepire cited one Bay Area special education class in which half of the pupils had been placed without parental knowledge.

Other parents are told that there are simply no other programs available, he remarked.

The "two per cent law" that does out state money for educationally handicapped students is one reason for this practice.

Lepire said the state imposed a limit of funding a maximum of 2 per cent of a school's population for Educationally Handicapped (or EH) programs, because it could not afford to pay for more.

Thus, parents with EH children are informed that there is no more space in the special classes, after that limit is reached.

Worst of all, Lepire said, educational authorities have reason to suspect that 1 to 2 per cent of all children never attend school at all. These children may simply be locked up in rooms at home because the families cannot afford remedial treatment.

Lepire conceded that the biggest weakness in the California educational master plan is that regular teachers are left wondering how to cope with the handicapped children who are in their classrooms.

"But we still don't have all the answers," Lepire said.

When teachers become frustrated by all the inefficiencies of the educational system, Lepire advises them to concentrate instead on being human beings.

"In education, feelings are always treated as tangential to what we're doing," he said.

A former teacher himself, Lepire described the temptation he felt to follow the bureaucrats, authorities, and experts.

Ignore them, Lepire advised.

"The emotional well-being of a child is inextricably connected to your own," he said.

Lepire claimed the best thing teachers can do is to preserve the integrity and open affection that children display much more openly than do adults.

Disability Costs

County Seeks Reductions

By RICK SULLIVAN

An employee safety program and statewide legislation is being prepared by the San Mateo County Manager's Office to reduce the number of disability benefit awards, which some officials believe is threatening the financial integrity of the retirement fund.

Assistant County Manager Max Meyer is heading a committee of top county administrators which is developing a job safety program for county employees.

The committee also is preparing proposed legislation which would give county retirement boards more flexibility in determining the extent of a claimant's disability.

A status report on the committee's work was presented to the Board of Supervisors Tuesday. Meyer said the report and the draft legislation would be ready by November.

Members of the board, notability Supervisor James Fitzgerald, are concerned that the increasing number of disability claims is taxing the County Retirement Fund to the extent that more fund contributions are being demanded of the county and employee members.

A recent actuarial report on the status of the fund recommended that the county increase its contributions from its present 7.2 per cent of employee salaries to 12.3 per cent in four years. Employee contributions were recommended for increase from its present range of 4.5 to 8.8 per cent to 8.2 to 8.8 per cent.

The report, which was presented to the supervisors, noted that one of the most important factors tending to boost the county's contribution, "is the very large increase in the rates of disability."

San Mateo County ranks third of the 20 largest counties in the state in total number of retirement benefits paid to those ruled permanently disabled.

But claims are starting to increase and local officials are worried that San Mateo may follow the lead of such counties as Ventura, Sonoma and Mendocino. In those counties, disability retirement amounts to about 20 per cent of all retirement benefits paid. The percentage is 11.1 per cent in San Mateo County.

According to Ross Conti, county treasurer who also acts as administrator of the retirement fund, there are 24 permanent disability claims waiting to be reviewed by the Board of Retirement. Eleven of those claims cite back injuries sustained both on and off the job as causing the disability.

Meyer said that since last December he has been developing an employee safety program with various department heads.

A specific program has not been drawn up, but Meyer indicated the committee is very concerned about teaching county employees how to lift properly.

"Most of our claimed disabilities are back related," said Meyer. "We want to instruct our people on how to lift correctly and save their backs."

The committee, Meyer added, also is investigating how pre-employment physical examinations may be made more stringent in an effort to screen prospective employees who may not be capable of performing the jobs for which they applied.

All county employees currently must undergo physical exams to determine if they can handle certain jobs. Meyer said it is rare that an employee is denied a job because of physical unsuitability.

"We've got to be able to tighten up on physical exams," Meyer said.

Draft legislation, which provides for greater flexibility in determining the extent of a claimant's disability also is being prepared by the committee.

State law now provides that retirement boards can only rule on claims in one of two ways -- a claimant is or is not totally disabled.

Meyer said he believes outgo from the retirement fund will decrease if retirement boards are allowed to determine a percentage of claimed disability.

According to law, a county employee judged permanently disabled to perform the work he was hired to do can collect half the salary he received in his last full year of employment.

Conti has calculated that the total lifetime liability today of the County Retirement Fund for those on permanent disability is $1.4 million.

Meyer said the committee also wants state law altered to allow counties greater leeway in transferring employees from positions they can no longer handle physically.

According to Conti, counties concerned about the increasing number of disability claims have on several occasions unsuccessfully attempted to lobby legislators to change state law regarding rulings of retirement boards.

Knights to Install

Frank Knight Enrique Lamont announced that Marian Council No. 3773, Knights of Columbus, will hold its Installation of Officers Sept. 15 at Good Shepherd Church, 901 Oceana Blvd., Pacifica.

The installation will take place during the celebration of mass at 7:30 p.m.

In addition to Lamont, the following officers will be installed by District Deputy Rich Rusting: Deputy Grand Knight, Cliff Hollander; Chancellor Ray Thurman; Warden Max Telles; Recorder Brian Kestner; Treasurer Ray Techirgi; Advocate Robert Hale; Inside Guards Oscar Bautista, Peter Murray and George Sestak; Outside Guards Alex Gallegos, Gil Hulsman and Tony Lamadora; Trustees Bud Capurro, Al Cortes and Rich Rusting.

Parking Standards Returned

New standards that would have allowed the South San Francisco Planning Commission to require more parking places in certain developments were sent back to the commission by the City Council for more work Wednesday night.

However, City Planner Bill Costanzo explained that the amendment actually was written by the commission as a compromise among the commissioners, and getting them to agree on anything else might be difficult.

Councilman William Borba was the only member to wholeheartedly support the proposed zoning amendment. In fact, he suggested that the city's parking problem could be resolved by even stiffer building regulations.

South San Francisco residents can't park in front of their own homes, Borba complained, because of the vehicle overflow from apartment buildings where there aren't enough spaces.

Mayor Emanuele Damonte grimaced when Borba suggested requiring as many as four parking places for a two-bedroom apartment unit.

"We're not creating the problem," Borba said. "It's the people, themselves, creating the problem in occupancy."

The proposed amendment would allow the commission, when a use permit is required, to raise the parking standards on apartment construction from one two spaces for a one-bedroom unit, from 1 1/2 to 2 1/2 on a two-bedroom unit and from 1 1/2 to 2 1/2 spaces on a three-bedroom unit.

It also would allow an increase in parking for commercial offices, from the presently required one space for each 300 square feet of area to one space for each 240 square feet of area.

On retail commercial developments, the commission could increase the requirement from one space for each 200 square feet of floor area to one space for each 160 square feet.

Costanzo emphasized that these increased standards would not be for all projects, only those the commission finds necessary.

That flexibility is precisely what bothered a local construction family and its attorney.

Attorney Floyd Parma, representing builder Maurice Brosnan, said the proposed amendment is vague and unintelligible.

He questioned the procedure that would be used in determining who would be forced to comply with the tougher parking provisions.

"This amendment gives the Planning Commission too much discretion," Parma said.

"This ordinance, as written, will foster many appeals to you and I'm sure it will foster many litigations," he said.

It could appear that there's favoritism involved, when two different developers with similar properties and projects appear and only one is required to provide more parking, Parma declared.

"Do you want to stifle development, or do you want to promote it?" Parma asked.

Then, the three Brosnan brothers -- all in the construction business -- blasted the proposal.

ONLY THE IRON SCULPTURE WHISTLES IN THE WIND

South San Francisco Industrial park has just 40 of 500 acres left.

Finding Industrial Property to Develop Increasingly Challenging

By JANET PARKER

When Paul Shepherd first set his eyes on what was to become one of the most glamorous industrial parks in the state, it was a wasteland of abandoned slaughterhouses and dumpsites.

Today, the South San Francisco park is nearing its capacity with more than 300 industries and businesses in a maze of tree- and grass-lined, extra wide streets.

When Shepherd looks out the window of his Daly City office, he has a sweeping view of the Cabot, Cabot & Forbes industrial park site that he helped develop in 1964.

The small hill jutting from the middle of the park -- marked by an iron sculpture that whistles in the wind -- is in direct view on clear days. A model of that same sculpture is planted behind Shepherd's desk.

"South San Francisco has a tremendous appeal to industry," Shepherd said. "It will be a matter of time until it will become a problem of lack of land in South San Francisco as it was in San Francisco."

Shepherd's job is to locate land which can be developed by industry. And, it's apparent in South San Francisco that he made the right choice when Cabot, Cabot & Forbes employed him.

Only about 40 acres of the 500-acre industrial park are yet to be developed. Shepherd credits the success of the massive project -- which supplemented the

INDUSTRIAL PARK DEVELOPER

Paul Shepherd went to work in 1964.

"Industrial City's" older, less cohesive industrial sector -- to good planning, a responsible city government that was interested in industry, and an ideal geographic location.

The list of industries in the industrial park today is impressive. One of Woolworth's few warehouses in the country is located there, having moved from San Francisco. Georgia-Pacific packaging moved its container manufacturing business there from Millbrae. Koret of California has constructed a major warehouse facility. United Parcel Services has located one of its busiest and newest branches there.

Gallo Wine relocated its building to the park from another location in the city. More than half the wine consumed in the Bay Area passes through that building, Shepherd said.

Shepherd has tried to attract office complexes and even a major hotel to the top of the mountain.

But, it became apparent that that area is best suited for industrial development.

Today, Shepherd said, industrial park development is more complicated and difficult than it was in 1964. In the first place, just finding property to develop is a challenge. Property which on the surface appears ideal may be built on fill; transportation access may be impossible.

"There are very few new industrial parks being developed," Shepherd said. "The risk factor is increasing tremendously."

The risks, he said, are more than those of land costs and market fluctuations.

"The risk I'm talking about is government approval," Shepherd said. Large sums of front-end investment are required in setting up an industrial or office park, and, in recent years, there's been a great chance those investments would turn sour.

"We're finding it's impossible to find investors and financial institutions willing to risk the thousands of dollars because of the changing status of government controls," he said.

"When Cabot, Cabot & Forbes was in the planning stages, it was a relatively simple matter of sitting down with city officials to arrive at a mutually acceptable plan.

"Now, we have agency after agency of single purposes," he said. "They are not the least bit concerned with unemployment, the tax base or commute distance for employees." As a result, the economy is hurting, he contended.

Some of the finest industrial parks in the world, "of which this is one," were built long before layers of government bureaucracy were thrown into the procedure, he said.

Shepherd said he believes the present system of taxation and planning is topsy-turvy. He supports a regional tax base, in this case including the nine Bay Area counties in a share-the-wealth system, and local planning. The trend today, he said, is toward a local tax base with a tendency toward regional planning.

"Basically, we're no longer residents of one community," Shepherd related. "Most of us live in one town, work in another and shop in a third." This results, he said, is a distortion of real estate tax income and local political jurisdiction boundary lines.

For example, he said, San Francisco International Airport is a nuisance for many San Mateo County residents and politicians. At the same time, San Francisco has many problems that affect San Mateo County residents who work and play in San Francisco.

With a regional tax base, solutions to those problems would be shared, he claimed.

He added that many businesses were forced to relocate to parks like Cabot, Cabot & Forbes because San Francisco couldn't handle expansion or because of redevelopment. That's another reason a regional tax base makes sense, he said.

"We have not lured any tax base away from San Francisco," said Shepherd in defense of his park. "The industries found it was in their best interests to move, to relocate," and the timing was right.

South San Francisco officials, he said, should be thinking ahead about future industrial opportunities for a city that has earned a Bay Area-wide reputation as "The Industrial City."

The best an industrial park can provide for a community -- above and beyond public facilities -- is successful industry, Shepherd acknowledged.

There's a tendency for government agencies to squeeze money out of the private sector for parks, walkways and public access, he said.

Those same agencies are missing the importance of the industrial sector itself.

"An industry that becomes broke and unsuccessful is a eventually a community problem," he said.

Pollution Measures To Force

A score of new air pollution control measures, most of them controversial, have been presented to a key task force of the Association of Bay Area Governments as part of a staff report on the causes and extent of air pollution in the region.

The proposed measures are part of ABAG's continuing work to prepare an overall environmental management plan by June 1978 for the nine counties bordering on San Francisco Bay.

The Environmental Management Task Force, chaired by San Francisco Supervisor Dianne Feinstein, has been guiding this work for the past 20 months. The 46-member task force is composed of local elected officials, representatives from state agencies, and representatives from special interest groups such as business, labor, environmentalists, health associations, minorities and agriculture.

"This list of measures proved to be as provocative to task force members as the longer list they reviewed in June," observed ABAG Association Executive Director Dean Magris. "We trimmed that list by removing those measures that appeared to be unacceptable to the task force or not sufficiently effective. Probably all of those that remain will have to be adopted eventually if we are going to meet state and federal clean air standards by the deadlines we've been given. We may have to add other ones."

EMTF members instructed staff to continue to investigate the effectiveness and ramifications of the control measures. The draft air quality plan will be released in October, just after draft plans for water quality and solid waste management. Data from over 500 agencies has been collected and used in preparing the drafts.

Following several public hearings, the overall environmental management plan will be voted on by local elected officials from Bay Area cities and counties next April at ABAG's annual meeting. The plan will describe necessary actions, their cost and who should pay for them, who should be responsible for seeing that they are carried out, and what will be necessary in future years. Responsibility for implementation will be spread among local, regional, state and federal agencies.

Eugene Leong, an ABAG engineer in charge of the air quality portion of the plan, said that air quality will continue to improve here until about 1985 because of the controls that are already on the books. After that, he said that our continued growth and heavy reliance on automobiles will block our attainment of the standards without implementation of new measures.

The proposed control measures fall into four categories.

Controls on stationary sources of pollution are the most effective. New controls might require stricter limits on industrial emissions and the use of high solids and water based coatings when painting cars, homes, and other surfaces.

More stringent vehicle exhaust emission controls plus inspection and maintenance programs for light- and heavy-duty vehicles are examples of controls that could be placed on mobile sources of pollution.

Transportation control measures could include such items as toll increases, a regional parking strategy, additional transit service, bus and carpool lanes, ramp metering, and an auto control zone in San Francisco's central business district.

A variety of land use and development control measures were proposed, aimed at three main targets:

- Reduce long distance auto commuting.
- Reduce the number of auto trips made and increase transit usage.
- Increase the efficiency of transportation systems to avoid congestion.

In August, after two years of controversial debate, Congress passed the Clean Air Act Amendments of 1977, giving critical air basins a 10-year extension to 1987 to meet Federal air quality standards.

DMV Hours Studied

A community-by-community survey to determine what hours and days of the week Department of Motor Vehicles offices should be open to best serve the needs of local residents will be undertaken this month, following Governor Brown's weekend signing of AB940, the varied office hours bill.

The legislation, authored by Assemblymen Louis J. Papan and John Vasconcellos, allows DMV to conduct a pilot program to determine feasibility of using flexible field office hours. It designates no more than 12 of its 147 field offices to be open on Saturday.

Hours of preference will be determined through questionnaires distributed to members of business and labor groups, civic and social organizations, at meetings of DMV's Back-seat Driver Public Panels, and to the motorists who visit DMV offices each day.

What DMV offices will participate in the pilot study will not be known until recommendations from the public and employees are received and evaluated, according to Chief Deputy Director Charles Erickson.

"The motoring public often finds it difficult or impossible to get to our offices during traditional 8-to-5 p.m. weekday working hours," Erickson said. "A DMV study conducted last year showed that 72 per cent of the public felt that those hours weren't adequate."

Presently, 48 DMV offices are open 45 hours a week, while 99 offices (those with 6:30 p.m. Thursday closings) are open 46 1/2 hours per week. Prior to AB940 the law did not prohibit state offices from being open additional days or hours, but mandated that they be open 8 to 5 Monday through Friday.

The legislation does not mean that all offices will change hours. In offices where it is determined that present hours are meeting the public need, no change will be made, Erickson said. No changes will be planned until the public has been heard from, he said.

The bill also asks DMV to survey its employees to determine their preferences for working variable hours, and, to the extent possible, to staff those offices with employees who have volunteered to work such hours.

Allowing for collection of employee and public questionnaires by the first of October, evaluation of the results, and time to fully publicize the changed hours, it is expected that it will be Jan. 1, 1978, before new office schedules go into operation.

The pilot program would continue until Dec. 31, 1979, with a preliminary report to the Legislature due Dec. 31, 1978, and a final report at the end of the pilot study.

SSF Has A New 'Sister'

South San Francisco has found itself a Sister city in a country from which four city councilmen claim ancestry - Italy.

Councilman Leo Padreddi announced last week that he has received word from the mayor of Lucca, Italy, that it has accepted the San Mateo County city as a "sister."

Padreddi initially made contact with City of Lucca officials on a trip to Italy last summer. The councilman was warmly greeted by leaders in Lucca, from which his own family came, but was informed that Lucca also had received a request for sister city status from Bakersfield.

In fact, he said, Lucca already has sister cities in France, Germany, England and Belgium.

Nonetheless, Padreddi said, on July 13 this year, the Lucca City Council met and approved a link with South San Francisco.

The councilmen are planning a person-to-person call to the mayor of Lucca in the next few weeks, along with an exchange of memorabilia.

Nick's Restaurant Community Minded

Commemorating the ninth year of the coastside rodeo, the employees at NICK'S restaurant in Rockaway Beach donned western garb to help celebrate Frontier Days. CHUCK GUST reports it was the first year that the community really went all-out in support of the festive occasion, which was a huge success. Luncheon only is served at the BAYHILL LOUNGE, and HARRY CURUSIS and MEL CICERO pride themselves on running the entire range of early-day selections. Steaks, eggs and omelettes, diet plates, pasta, soups, salads, fish and several sandwiches are served from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. "Get Happy," the smash musical comedy playing to overflow crowds in LEHR'S CABARET at the GREENHOUSE in San Francisco, has garnered rave reviews from the critics. Out of the 165 exchange students who spent the summer here, the real lucky ones were those who stayed with Mr. Strauss. He treated the students to dinner at SCOTTY CAMPBELL'S in Redwood City before their return to Japan. Luncheon specials are served Monday through Friday, 11 a.m. to 2 p.m., at VINCE'S Italian and Seafood restaurant. Besides a varied selection of favorites, each day presents a feature. Served with a choice of clam chowder or minestrone soup, or luncheon salad, and coffee.

MENU SCRUTINY

Enrico Goes Western For Rodeo Good Time

ROMANO'S went "country" over the recent holiday weekend. Many who attended the rodeo in Pacifica, as well as performing cowboys, wound up having dinner at ENRICO ROMANO'S bustling Italian and seafood restaurant in Rockaway Beach. With cowboy attire setting the mood, Enrico said the atmosphere was definitely "good times." A best bet for an unforgettable dinner at ROSEBUD'S ENGLISH PUB on San Francisco's theater row is the house specialty, Breast of Chicken Tiffani. It is boneless breast of chicken stuffed with bananas, nuts and fruit, sauteed in butter. PHIL LEHR'S STEAKERY, on the lower level of the San Francisco Hilton Tower, Taylor Street entrance, is a steak lover's paradise, with one of the largest selections of steaks in San Francisco. It is the place to really indulge yourself, on anything from a huge Porterhouse to a gourmet cooked-at-the-table flaming steak Diane. Although vacations are over and school has started, there are still many summertime days ahead to enjoy. Which means you'll see plenty of sun lovers lounging on the VILLA HOTEL'S sundeck, overlooking the pool. Patio chairs and tables, with or without umbrellas for shade, are situated around the pool for guests who wish to order food and beverages from the VILLA COFFEE HOUSE.

OK, who are the five most beautiful women of modern times? According to a poll taken at Mme. Tussaud's Waxworks Museum in London, they are Twiggy, Brigitte Bardot, Marilyn Monroe, Elizabeth Taylor and Raquel Welch.

Four of these women have been in Tussaud's annual list since 1970. Miss Monroe, having died, has not appeared every year although her memory lingers like a lovely ghost. The other women who are mentioned among the most beautiful are Sophia Loren, Princess Grace of Monaco, Jackie Kennedy, Julie Andrews and Audrey Hepburn.

So there you have it, the most beautiful women in the world according to visitors at a London Museum.

Left handers arise! Do you know that Leonardo da Vinci was left-handed; so were Betty Grable, Harpo Marx, Admiral Nelson, two U.S. Presidents and scores of baseball players, boxers and the like. Being left-handed helped such people find success.

More handicapped were Sarah Bernhardt who lost a leg, Cervantes who lost an arm, James Thurber who was blind in one eye, Beethoven and Milton who were totally mute, Stienmetz who was a hunchback and Franklin D. Roosevelt who was paralyzed.

Now that we are speaking of odd facts, do you know that Ulysses S. Grant, the man who led the Union Armies in the Civil War that ended slavery, owned slaves. It is said that one of them was given to his wife as a wedding present. Although he did not come gift wrapped, his name was William Jones, and he remained a slave until the Grants granted him his freedom.

A list of other unlikely slave holders of historical significance includes the names of Columbus, Aristotle, Martin Luther, St. Thomas Aquinas and Patrick Henry, the give me liberty or give me death man. Such a list makes it possible to understand why the wise Voltaire shook his philosophical head and exclaimed, "Slavery is as ancient as war and war as human nature."

These facts come from a new volume, The Book of Lists by David Wallenchinsky and Irving and Ann Wallace (Morrow 1977, $10.35). Every list you ever wanted is in it; 15 famous events that happened in the bathtub, the 10 most glamorous cities in the world, the most famous male virgins (Hitler was one), the 21 best known stuffed (embalmed) humans (Charlemagne was embalmed like a stuffed animal and placed upon his throne with a crown on his head until another emperor wanted the throne and crown for himself), 10 famous men who were supported by their wives, 20 famous high school dropouts, 11 women who were high school cheerleaders (Patty Hearst was one). So it goes. 521 pages of lists including the ten worst movies of all time (there's a John Wayne movie among them), the 10 rarest autographs, the ten most wanted men of all time on F.B.I. lists (John Dillinger is not on it), the 15 most dangerous airlines and on and on.

On the other hand, "The Book of Lists" should be found in any good reference collection. It brings up to date some of the good-old handbooks of the past and unlike many of them it has an adequate index. Besides, it proves that gathering information can be fun.

Pair Held in Plane Theft Try

Two Pacifica men were arrested for burglary of an aircraft early Saturday after they were spotted by a highway patrolman sitting in a plane at the Half Moon Bay Airport.

Booked at the county jail by sheriff's deputies were Lionel Otis Arruda, 22, of 536 Edgemar Ave., and Paul Douglas Miller, 19, of 123 Avalon Way, Pacifica. According to Sheriff's Deputies William Cogswell and Richard D. Trammell, the pair were spotted in a Cessna Skylane in the tie-down area of the airport about 2 a.m. by Highway Patrolman Richard Duncan. Duncan took the men into custody and called for sheriff's deputies.

Cogswell said that Arruda claimed he was only practicing "groundschool," and had been moving the controls of the aircraft while holding a manual on "Electronics for Aerospace Vehicles."

Flashing Vehicle Lights Attract Deputy; 2 Arrested

A deputy sheriff who stopped to assist a driver apparently in distress this morning stumbled across a burglary in progress, according to a South San Francisco Police spokesman.

The deputy was northbound on Highway 101 at 4 a.m. when he noticed a vehicle with its lights flashing near the Highway 380 approach and stopped to help South San Francisco Police Sgt. Fred Carelli said the deputy saw a man approaching from the fenced area around Budget

Rent-A-Car's parking lot. Moments later, a second man carrying a jack came from the area, and the two made a pretense of trying to change a tire that wasn't flat, Carelli said.

When he noticed some tires in the backseat of the men's car, the deputy radioed for help.

Arrested on auto burglary charges were Regino Kenneth Custodio, 19, of 718 Larch Ave., South San Francisco and Alberto Jose Martinez, 18, of 138 Longford Drive, South San Francisco.

Run a Risk: Eat an Oyster

If you eat a raw oyster taken from San Francisco Bay, you run the risk of contracting infectious hepatitis or typhoid.

Henry Ongerth, chief sanitary engineer for the California State Department of Health, presented this grim conclusion recently to a task force of the Association of Bay Area Governments.

Members of the Environmental Management Task Force first head an optimistic report from Griff Johnson, Regional Water Quality Control Board planning director. Johnson stated that RWQCB surveys over the past 15 years showed "continued improvement in the bacteriological content of San Francisco Bay waters."

Johnson added that "essentially all offshore waters and most shoreline waters meet or exceed State bathing water — or swimmable — standards." He also said that the last two samples were taken in dry weather periods and therefore did not show the higher pollutant levels that might be found in the Bay after storms.

Ongerth, however, pointed out that samples were taken over a very limited period of time and because they reflected dry weather conditions, "we couldn't conclude from the figures that bay waters would be safe during periods of storm runoff." He agreed that significant progress has been made in controlling bacteriological bay pollution from municipal and industrial sources, but emphasized that pollution from non-point sources — especially from surface runoff — still causes too much contamination to permit shellfish harvesting in the Bay. Contamination can also come from viruses and other toxicants.

"The quality of bay water sometimes meets the standards in some locations," Ongerth said. "At other times and in other places, it does not."

Ongerth concluded that although bay water quality has improved, there are still too many unknowns, too much risk of serious surface runoff, contamination during storms or unpredictable treatment plant breakdowns to permit shellfish harvesting in the Bay.

B. J. Miller, ABAG's director of environmental quality, concurred that surface runoff, which is running off urban or rural areas and entering creeks and streams, is the most serious source of shellfish contamination.

Mark Koenig is one of the last remnants of what is considered by most baseball historians to have been the best team of all time — the 1927 New York Yankees. Koenig was the shortstop on that team and played a significant role in helping to mold a jell of potential greatness.

Here is a man who slept in the train berth across from Babe Ruth (and who also beat the hell out of him in a dugout fight); who knew Ty Cobb well enough to call him, along with Leo Durocher, one of the most miserable human beings he ever met in baseball; who hit Dizzy Dean like he owned him; who regularly dined at Lou Gehrig's home; who played alongside three of the greatest second basemen in baseball history (Charlie Gehringer, Tony Lazzeri and Billy Herman); who saw Ruth call his shot in the 1932 World Series and watched Grover Cleveland Alexander's famous bases loaded strikeout of Lazzeri in the 1926 World Series . . . and yet he sits sipping beer in his Glen Ellen home virtually forgotten by a sporting press consumed with reports of contracts and expansion and litigation and spoiled kids calling themselves professional athletes.

KOENIG, who once owned a service station in San Francisco and resided in Millbrae until less than a decade ago, sits and sips and sadly says of the legends:

"Gosh, you never know what became of those guys. How they disappear. It seems strange, after you play four or five years with fellas, live with them, know their families, and then all of a sudden 50 years have passed and you haven't seen them. I wrote George Pipgras once, and he answered, and I wrote again, and then I never heard from him. I wrote Waite Hoyt a couple of letters and he answered, but then we sort of drifted apart. I wrote Mrs. Pennock after Herb died (he died in 1948) and she answered, for awhile, and then that was all. Herb was one of my greatest friends in baseball, one of the nicest guys I ever met in baseball, a gentleman. Oh, what a beautiful lefty he was. . . ."

Koenig's eyes brighten, however, when he talks of the Yankees as they were then, especially the 1927 gang.

"Tony Lazzeri and I broke in the year before as a rookie doubleplay combination and we took the pennant from Cleveland in a close race, after finishing seventh the year before, and a lot of people might have been thinking we were flukes, because the Braves beat us in our first two spring exhibitions, 16-4 and 18-3.

"THEN WE headed north and our first exhibition is against Brooklyn and Dazzy Vance is pitching and he had invited all his relatives from Atlanta to see him, and in the first inning, our leadoff batter, Jack Coombs, hits him with a line drive and Dazzy has to leave the game, and that set us off. We took 13 straight off them, and we just kept on going in the regular season."

Koenig chuckles, sips his beer, sits back and remembers. "We had no curfew. We'd never get in before 2-3 a.m. There was a fancy hotel in Washington with a swimming pool in the lobby. They drained it one night while we were out, but they always had infra-red lighting on it, so it looked the same, full or empty. We came in one night and Johnny Grabowski, one of our catchers, decided to sober up by diving into the pool, which had two inches of water in it. He banged his noggin and damn near killed himself. But there was somebody to take his place.

"That was a great club, you have to admit it."

AND IF KOENIG wasn't great himself, he was very good, and rubbed elbows with the greats, and not just with the Yankees. He was one of those San Francisco kids who learned his baseball on the diamonds of Golden Gate Park, along with his old buddy, Willie Kamm (now a San Mateo resident), and Joe Cronin, Harry Heilmann, and a host of others who could make up a mythical Big Rec major league all-star team. He started his pro career in Moose Jaw, Canada, under the legendary San Francisco Seals manager, Nick Williams. ("I think I enjoyed those days more than when I got to the big leagues.")

Koenig made it to the big leagues when he was only 22, played major league ball for 12 years, was in five World Series, and carried a lifetime batting average of .279.

A BIG GUY in those days, for an infielder or anyone else, at 6 feet, 180 pounds, Koenig is a man with intense pride, and he was hurt a year ago when a Sonoma County sports writer described him as an old man.

The hackles rise when Koenig relates that story, and it is easy to imagine that he did once handle Ruth. The "altercation," as Koenig describes it, occurred in an exhibition game against the minor league Baltimore club. Ruth was "taking a day off" by playing first base, and late in the game a doubleplay ball was hit to Lazzeri. But, recalls Koenig, "he threw it 20 feet over my head, and I didn't jump for it because I knew I couldn't get close."

That prolonged the inning and, remembers Koenig, "this Ruth started in on me. I guess he had a date with one of his blondes or something and wanted to get the game over with. He started shouting at me right out on the field, and I called him a yellow SOB and told him he had no guts."

When the side was retired, Koenig, the second hitter in the inning, was stooping to pick up a bat just above the steps leading down into the clubhouse runway. Ruth "came up behind me and shoved me down the steps and jumped on me and started pounding away on me. I managed to grab him and turn him over like I was emptying a cornucopia, and then I started taking my whacks, and then some of the other guys were saying, 'Let me take a sock at him.'"

WHILE KOENIG had little respect for Ruth as a person because, "he had the mentality of a child, and I don't think he ever read a book in his life," he still has the highest respect for him as a baseball player.

For a period of time when Ruth was at his peak, balls which bounced over fences were called homeruns, and one of baseball's old controversies centers around how many such "gift" homeruns Ruth got.

"I NEVER saw one of Ruth's homeruns bounce over a fence," asserts Koenig. "He hit big, lofty flies, and most of them went completely out of the park we were playing in, not just over the fence."

"If that guy was living now, he'd hit. . . . Oh, Christ, you couldn't count the homers. And he was one helluva pitcher, and he never made a mistake. He had those natural instincts. A good outfielder with a beautiful arm. And pretty fast for a big guy. He'd be just as dominant today as he was then. He was a prodigy. I don't know whether you'll ever see another player like Ruth."

After the incident with Ruth at Baltimore, Koenig didn't talk to him until the day the Yankees cinched the pennant, and then he shook hands with Ruth. (To be concluded next week.)

Oyster Point Design Women's Approved in South SF League: 3 Tied

By JANET PARKER
An Oyster Point Marina subcommittee has approved the design plan for the $8.4 million marina expansion and agreed to pass its recommendation to the South San Francisco Parks and Recreation Commission and the Planning Commission.

The group also asked, however, for a comprehensive study of similar Bay Area marinas, emphasizing their parking and access arrangements.

The study, it was stated last Thursday, would be for the eventual consideration of the City Council. If the study indicates that the Oyster Point Marina parking and access plans are inadequate, the subcommittee wants its recommendation withdrawn.

The meeting at City Hall was the first and last by the committee, comprised of three parks and recreation commissioners and three planning commissioners.

The proposed project design was presented by Bill Carroll of the engineering firm Daniel, Mann, Johnson & Mendenhall, and landscape architect Cas Ahey.

Among other facets, they explained that the number of new berths has been reduced from 595 to 569, although the total boat line allowable has been increased. Berth rentals are based on boat length, so the new berthing plan could actually mean more revenue for the marina, they said.

They also explained that settlement in the paved areas could be as much as several feet over a "period of years" because the marina is built on Bay fill.

"There's no way you can get away from it," Carroll said, pointing out that periodic maintenance will be required.

Of particular concern was the single road in and out of the marina peninsula. City staff members explained, however, that the access plan has been approved by fire and police departments.

There also was concern that during peak operating hours — particularly warm weekends — there would not be enough parking at the marina for both boaters and restaurant patrons. Ahey said 705 parking places are included in the design.

Planning Commissioner Roberta Teglia also questioned whether the increasing number of marinas springing up on San Francisco Bay will result in a surplus of boat berths in the coming years.

"No way," Carroll responded. "There's always been a shortage and there always will be."

Parks and Recreation Director Lyle Norton said there are 2,200 boats on waiting lists at Bay Area marinas, although some boaters could be on more than one list.

Jim Keegan, a member of a taxpayers organization which has questioned the validity of the project, packed up his notebook and walked out of the meeting at one point.

He had been questioning financial aspects of the project, and City Planner William Costanzo told him the discussion was intended to deal with the design only. The subcommittee members, Costanzo said, have no jurisdiction over financial feasibility.

"If you consistently pick on people, you will not have people at your meetings," another member, John Falsarella, responded.

After eight weeks of league play, in the Daly City Recreation Department Women's Softball League, three teams finished tied for first.

Rael's Place, Catomer Realty and Natural Gas all finished league play with records of (6-2).

Discovery Walks To Be Expanded

San Mateo County Baylands and ocean shores are rich in wildlife, and trained volunteers from the Coyote Point Museum have shared their knowledge and interest in the environment with hundreds of school children and others on field trips to these areas.

Last year, the demand for in-depth discovery walks far exceeded the number of available docents. Many requests were refused. However, this year these two exciting and unique areas will be featured in the Coyote Point Museum's fall training for docents, Sept. 21 through Dec. 4, 9:30 a.m. to noon.

The class will be taught by Bob Breen, marine biologist, Louis Evraiff, Coyote Point museum docent, and guest lecturers. During the 13 sessions, the docent trainees will become familiar with the inhabitants of the Baylands and the seashore, principles of ecology, interpretive techniques and methods of handling groups. The class involves study, field exploration, sharing of ideas and a lot of fun while doing it.

Classes will be held at the Museum at Coyote Point and at the James V. Fitzgerald Marine Reserve in Moss Beach.

For docent application or more information call the Coyote Point Museum, 573-2595. An open house will be held at the Museum on Sept. 15 from 10 a.m. to noon. This will be an opportunity for interested persons to meet some of the docents and hear about the Museum's discovery walks and programs.

Boating Classes

Free boating safety classes are being offered in Daly City, announced the Department of Navigation and Ocean Development, the State's boating agency.

The classes are conducted by the U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary and the U.S. Power Squadrons, two volunteer organizations dedicated to promoting boating safety through education.

In Daly City, classes will begin Sept. 14. For more information or reservations phone 921-4630.

Aids to navigation, rules of the road, motorboat handling, plotting, marine electronics, and weather are a few of the subjects covered in advanced or introductory classes.

"The free boating safety classes offered by the U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary and the U.S. Power Squadrons are a long tradition in California. I urge the boating public to take advantage of this opportunity," said Marty Mercado, department director.

Hole-in-One Competition

The San Mateo Women's Golf Club will hold a hole-in-one competition on guest day, Sept. 20, at the San Mateo Municipal Golf Course.

Proceeds from this event will benefit the Mental Health Association of San Mateo County.

Competition will be on the 17th hole. Mrs. A. W. (Ann) Weck, chairman of the event, promises prizes for those getting near the cup. Other committee members helping with the event are Mrs. J. (Joyce) Albera and Mrs. P. (Ruth) Dwyer.

Bootsy's R.B. Takes Softball League Title

Bootsy's Rubber Balls defeated Westlake Sporting Goods 14-5 to win the High School Softball League, sponsored by the Daly City Recreation Department.

Bootsy's and Westlake Sporting Goods finished the league tied for first place with (6-1) records. In the playoff game, Bootsy's Dave Ramirez was 4 for 4 with 6 RBI's, Dave Cirelli was 3 for 4 with 3 RBI's, John Smith was 3 for 5 with 3 RBI's and Matt Vucurovich was 3 for 4.

Westmoor Grad Play Praised

By DICK DRAPER

Offensive linemen are underrated, unsung, unknown, underprivileged, unnoticed.

Usually, it's that guy with the ball. Ta dah! The honor, the yardage, the glory.

And it could have been one of those stereotyped days for the University of California — a one-man-getting-all-the-credit, the-other-getting-nothing-afternoon — when the Bears played Tennessee last Saturday.

Fullback Paul Jones tied a Cal record by carrying the ball 31 times, rushing for 128 yards and helping the Bears win 27-17.

Now comes the surprise. "Leo Biedermann got the block time after time," said Jones of Cal's weak side offensive tackle and former Westmoor High star who made the running attack go. "In fact, everybody was doing the job."

Cal Coach Mike White also credited the 6-8, 280-lb.

Biedermann with a strong game.

"If we had an outstanding offensive lineman award, it would go to Biedermann," said White. "We ran to his side most of the time, and he was blocking his man every time. I was impressed with him."

Still, it was up to Jones, the sophomore from San Jose playing in his first game since he tore a knee ligament against Oklahoma last season, to make the yardage. And he did.

"I'm reading my blocks better and picking up the holes faster," said Jones at the meeting of the Northern California Football Writers in San Francisco Monday. "I didn't know I'd be carrying the ball that many times, but I was prepared because I knew we'd have to establish ball control."

For Jones and the Bears, the victory was important — it was White's first opening-game win in six tries and the Bears' first since 1968.

"If you lose that first game it can put a damper on things," said Jones. "But if you win that carries over week after week . . . unless you let down."

White, although happy, pointed out the Bears are hardly "ready for the Hall of Fame yet" as they prepare for Saturday's contest at Memorial Stadium in Berkeley against the Air Force, which tied Wyoming 0-0 last weekend.

"Defensively, we did have inconsistency," White said. "We had some lapses, and we definitely have room for improvement in every area."

But White was impressed with the work of quarterback Charlie Young, who came into the contest relatively untested. The junior from Canoga Park started his first collegiate game on the one-yard line in front of 84,000 people, threw his first pass from the five-yard-line (it was good) and despite a few errors, drew the coach's praise.

Swimming At Westmoor

The Westmoor Pool at Westmoor High School, 131 Westmoor Ave., is open for recreation swimming daily through Oct. 7, according to the following schedule:

MONDAYS	7-9 p.m.
TUESDAYS	7-9 p.m.
WEDNESDAYS (Adults Only)	7-9 p.m.
THURSDAYS	7-9 p.m.
FRIDAYS	7-9:30 p.m.
SATURDAYS	1-3:30 p.m.
SUNDAYS	1-2:30 p.m. (Family Swim) 2:30-4 p.m. (General)

The swim program is sponsored by the Daly City Recreation Department and also offers exercise-lap swimming each night Monday through Thursday, 9-9:30 p.m. Family swim continues on Sundays from 1-2:30 p.m.

Fees are 25 cents for elementary students, 35 cents for high schoolers and 60 cents for adults. Reduced rate swim passes may be purchased at the pool.

Registration for fall swim lessons for youth and adults will be Sept. 24 at the Westmoor High School Gym, 10 a.m. to noon. Schedules are available at the pool, recreation office, or any Daly City library.

Chinese Language Classes

The Northern Peninsula Chinese School will begin its fall Chinese language and cultural class on Sept. 15 at Westborough Junior High School, South San Francisco.

Classes will be Tuesdays and Thursdays from 3:45 to 4:45 p.m. Children 5 to 15 years are eligible. Fee is $25 for the semester.

For more information, call Faye Lee, 583-1775; Shirley Yee, 588-0464; or Mary Ann Hoey, 761-0288.

Urbano Is Guest Speaker

Former football player and wrestler Rey Urbano, Daly City, will be the guest speaker when the Golden West Charter Chapter of the American Business Women's Association holds its monthly meeting at Martine-lli's Steak Pit, Millbrae, on Sept. 19.

Urbano played guard for the San Francisco City College 1948 Championship Team, and later became a professional wrestler. He has developed an interesting and exciting football game, "First and Ten" that is being used by the Ford Motor Co. as a promotional device. Urbano is the center coordinator for the Daly City Lincoln Park Club House.

Club Holds a Tea

Xi Rho Zeta Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi joined guests in South San Francisco at the home of President Mrs. Linda Armanino for beginning day tea Aug. 27.

Agenda for the coming year was presented by chairpersons: Mrs. Dana McGrath of San Bruno for social events, ways and means by Myrna Buswell of San Bruno, and philanthropic plans by Mrs. Becky Cooper of Daly City.

Mrs. Debbie Chaney of South San Francisco was hostess at the Sept. 1 meeting when members were initiated.

Pacifica Well Represented

Pacifica was well represented at the recent San Francisco County Flower Show at Hall of Flowers.

Individual members of the Pacifica Branch of the American Fuchsia Society won outstanding awards. Mr. and Mrs. Jack Scott won the fuchsia "Sweepstakes" in Novice Division, taking four first places. Mrs. Marge Gentry took four first places and five second places in the fuchsia Intermediate Division and Mr. and Mrs. John Elliott had two second awards in fuchsias.

Ted Paskesen, member of the Pacifica Branch of the America Fuchsia Society, also grows pelargoniums. He won the "Perpetual Trophy" given by the Spring Blossom Society. Paskesen's pelargoniums won 11 first places, nine second places, and seven third places.

Mrs. Marge Gentry, one of the above winners, will speak on "winterizing your fuchsias" Sept. 16 at the 8 p.m. meeting of the Pacifica Branch at Pacifica Manor School, 411 Oceana Blvd.

Low Cost Rabies Clinic

A low cost rabies clinic, sponsored by local veterinarians and the county health and welfare department, is scheduled Sept. 17.

Shots for dogs and cats are $3.

The clinic is open from 1 to 3 p.m. at San Bruno War memorial Building.

All dogs four months and older should be vaccinated every two years.

Suspended Sentence

Anthony Fasano, 48, of Pacifica, has been sentenced in U.S. District Court to a two-year suspended sentence, two years probation, and a $3,000 fine for two counts of federal income tax evasion.

On July 20, Fasano pled nolo contendere to attempting to evade $2,379 and $4,054 on his 1970 and 1971 income tax returns by under-reporting his taxable income for those years by $12,309 and $18,751, respectively.

Fasano, a truck driver, lives at 1008 Anza Drive, Pacifica.

Under Internal Revenue laws, Fasano also will be liable for the unpaid taxes, plus interest and civil penalties.

Good morning, good cooks.

If you have tuned out to tuna noodle casserole, here's a new budget stretching casserole idea for you: Chili Rice Puff.

This Mexican style entree combines canned chili with ground beef, rice, almonds and raisins. Similar to a soufflé (but easier) it gets its "puff" from beaten eggs.

Good for buffets, luncheons or suppers, Chili Rice Puff needs only a salad accompaniment. Try either a simple tossed green salad, or a fancier Avocado Tomato Salad.

CHILI RICE PUFF

- 1/2 pound lean ground beef
- 1 can (15-oz.) chili con carne without beans
- 1/4 cup toasted chopped almonds
- 1/4 cup chopped seedless raisins
- 1 teaspoon chili powder
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1 1/2 cups cooked rice
- 3 eggs, separated

Cook the half pound beef in skillet until brown; drain off drippings. Mix in the chili con carne, fourth cup each almonds and raisins, one teaspoon chili powder, fourth teaspoon salt and 1/4 cup of the cooked rice. (Saving the rest of the rice for the topping.)

Beat the three egg whites until stiff peaks form; fold in the yolks. Fold the remaining cup rice into the eggs. In lightly greased, 1 1/2 quart casserole, alternate layers of egg and chili mixtures, ending with egg mixture. Bake in pre-heated 375 degree oven 25 minutes, or until puffy and golden brown.

AVOCADO TOMATO SALAD

- 3 small tomatoes, diced
- 2 ripe avocados, peeled, pitted and diced
- 2 hard cooked eggs, chopped
- 1 small onion, chopped
- 1/4 cup French dressing
- 1 teaspoon chili powder
- 3/4 teaspoon salt
- Lettuce

Combine the three small tomatoes, two ripe avocados, two hard cooked eggs and one small onion, chopped. Toss gently with the fourth cup French dressing, one teaspoon chili powder and three-fourths teaspoon salt. Chill. Serve over lettuce.

Yearbook Receives Award

For the first time in the history of the South San Francisco school, Southwood Junior High School's yearbook, The Savage, received a first class or excellent rating from the Columbia Scholastic Press Association at Columbia Scholastic Press Association at Columbia University in New York.

"The school year is excellently covered — pictorially. The staff and the adviser should be praised for a job well done!" This is the opinion of the judge for Columbia Scholastic Press Association.

The staff was specifically commended for the fine job they did in covering faculty and curriculum. The judge noted: "Very excellent and interesting coverage of the faculty and curriculum. You really personalized the faculty — good job!"

The judge's final comments were: "Student photographers did a good job!" and the book contained "Good coverage of all sports."

The staff of the 1977 Savage received a total of 908 points out of a possible 1,000 points in the contest.

Pacifica Wants Leaders

Pacifica's Parks, Beaches and Recreation Department has openings in the community center division for leaders and directors.

Positions are for 20 hours a week.

For an application, write City Hall, 170 Santa Maria Ave.

Applications will be accepted until Sept. 16.

Boys Wanted for Scouting

Cub Scout Packs and scout troops in this area will invite boys not in the scouting program to join them as part of the annual Fall Membership program of the San Mateo County Council, Boy Scouts of America.

The "All Aboard for Scouting" program will include local school nights to be conducted by scouting volunteers at elementary and junior high schools. All boys of cub and scout age and their parents can attend school nights to learn of the Boy Scouts of America programs.

Directing the membership program are Glenn Hartzheim, "All Aboard for Scouting" chairman, and Harold Krank, scout executive of the San Mateo County Council/BSA.

The cub scout program is family-centered. Boys who have completed second grade or are eight through 10 years old are eligible. They meet weekly as a den under supervision of a den leader. Each month all dens meet as a pack led by a cubmaster. Boys start as bobcats and earn wolf, bear, webelos, and arrow of lights awards.

The scout program is for boys who have completed fifth grade or are 11 through 17 years old. The program is designed to develop character, mental and physical fitness, and citizenship training through vigorous activities. Troops consisting of patrols with elected leaders, meet weekly under the leadership of a scoutmaster. Scouts may earn tenderfoot, second class, first class, star, life and eagle progress awards.

For information regarding date, time, and location of school nights in your area, phone the scout service center at 341-5633.

Scholarships Available

High school seniors are invited to apply for 17 four-year college scholarship awards available under Pacific Gas and Electric Company's annual scholarship program.

The scholarship application deadline is Oct. 31. The program is offered to high school students who will graduate in 1978 and who attend school or live in PG&E's service area in Northern and Central California.

Information booklets and application forms are available from counselors at high schools in PG&E's service area or from its local offices.

Seventeen scholarships of $1,000 a year for four years will be awarded. Each of 34 runners-up will receive a one-time $500 award. The awards may be applied to undergraduate education at any accredited college or university of the student's choice in the United States.

Thirteen of the 17 scholarships are awarded according to geographical areas, apportioned among PG&E's operation divisions. Two are set aside for children of PG&E employees. Two others are awarded to minority students in special recognition of significant achievement despite economic, environmental or motivational disadvantages.

Fifty-one finalists will be selected — three for each scholarship. The 17 winners will be chosen during final judging in San Francisco April 26, 1978.

Since its beginning in 1966, the program has awarded 178 four-year scholarships to outstanding students.

Bruno Teachers Approve Unique Contract

Mopeds—A New Hazard

The increasing popularity of motorized bicycles — or mopeds — has created a new category of vehicle accidents, Highway Patrol Commissioner Glen Craig noted in reporting that 300 injury accidents involving mopeds occurred during the first seven months of 1977.

Craig said comparable figures for prior years are unavailable because "there was no statistical category established. The problem just began to grow in the last year."

The commission said 260 injury accidents occurred on city streets while 40 were recorded in unincorporated areas under CHP jurisdiction. "The pattern is similar to bicycle accidents. More occur in the urbanized areas where right of way confusion produces conflicts," Craig said.

Handicapped to Meet

Handicapped chapter of San Mateo County will hold its monthly get-together Sept. 17 at Crystal Springs Rehabilitation Center, 35 Tower Road, San Mateo.

Mass will be offered at 11 a.m. with a luncheon prepared and served by members of Catholic Social Service Auxiliary to follow.

A special musical treat has been arranged by Mrs. Edward Cullen, program chairman. The blind musician, Larry Martin of Redwood City, singer, pianist and accordionist, will perform.

All handicapped and blind men and women over the age of 18 are cordially invited to attend the monthly gatherings. The group meets every third Saturday of the month. Transportation is provided.

By JANET PARKER
San Bruno teachers have approved an unusual three-year contract, its first under collective bargaining laws, after six months of negotiation.

The Board of Trustees met last Monday night and also is expected to approve the contract. It would be effective immediately.

The contract covers the years 1977-78, 78-79 and 79-80. It's unusual in that many school districts in the state have settled on two-year packages in their first collective bargaining year, but few have on longer contracts.

Russ Hanley, San Bruno education Association negotiator, said he believes it's the first three-year contract in the Bay Area.

The contract disregards the first year California public school districts were to negotiate under collective bargaining, 1976-77. Disputes over exclusive representation between SBEA, a California Teachers Association affiliate, and the American Federation of Teachers delayed the start of negotiations until February this year.

As a result, the district's 155 teachers received no salary raise last year. They did receive increment increases, which are salary compensations for additional education. While some teachers received as much as $1,000, about one-third received nothing.

Hanley said the teachers voted 124-26 in secret ballots Thursday to accept the proposed contract.

The contract includes:
• Salary increases of 8, 5 and 5 per cent for the three respective school years.

• Revisions in rules governing compensation for continued education, transfer and employee evaluation.

• An additional stipend of about $100 for fifth grade teachers expected to attend a week-long outdoor education program with their students at La Honda.

Also agreed to is a clause allowing advisory arbitration of grievances through the American Arbitration Association.

The SBEA originally had sought — as did many teacher unions throughout the state — binding arbitration.

Hanley said the tentative agreement upon clause is "just as good. It amounts to trust."

Associate Superintendent Dr. Robert Rottman, the district's negotiating representative, said it's unlikely the board would act against an arbitrator's ruling "unless it was a very bad decision."

Rottman said the revised rules for professional compensation (increases in salary based on additional education) require that the superintendent approve the courses or workshops involved. For example, the superintendent would determine if an art class taken by a math teacher warrants compensation from the district.

In addition, teachers will now be permitted to get credit for workshops and independent study. Presently, they can be compensated only for courses at accredited colleges and universities.

Another provision in the contract allows negotiations to be opened in the third year if the state legislature says any new topics can be included in the scope of collective bargaining.

The salary increase for this year is retroactive to July 1.

Rottman said the total cost of the first year of the contract is about $250,000. That will come out of the district's reserves, which total about $750,000, he said.

"Both sides emphasized that the main reason for agreeing to a three-year term was to allow teachers, administrators and the board a period of time in which to work together for the improvement of the instructional programs of the district rather than facing one another as adversaries," a press release said.

Schools: Women Not Paid Enough

Various staff positions traditionally held by women have been upgraded and letters are being sent to parents announcing a new grievance procedure in the San Bruno Park School District's attempt to satisfy federal antidiscrimination policies.

Associate Supt. Dr. Robert Rottman explained that the district this year evaluated the salary of all its classified personnel — employees such as secretaries and maintenance workers — and decided that nine of those traditionally held by women are not paid well enough.

For example, Rottman said, the district had one position, usually held by a woman, called a cafeteria secretary, who had the responsibility for budgeting and planning far beyond typical secretarial duties.

That position was the first to be upgraded and placed at a higher salary level.

"It wasn't so much that because they were women they got a raise," Rottman explained. "We found that a lot of positions held by women were paid at a low rate compared to other positions."

In a sense, he said, it corrected past misplacement and recognized the responsibilities of such workers as head cafeteria cooks.

The district this year is establishing its total procedure for compliance with Title IX of the 1972 federal educational amendments.

Title IX is aimed at ending discrimination on the basis of sex in schools. Non-complying schools could lose federal funding, Rottman said.

In a letter to be mailed to all parents this month, it is explained that Rottman is the coordinator of the district's Title IX effort.

Any student or employee believing he or she has been discriminated against, denied a benefit or excluded from participation on the basis of sex may file a written complaint with Rottman.

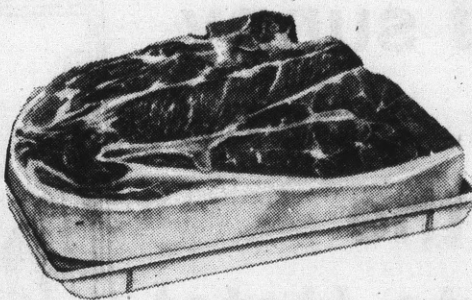

Parents may file on behalf of their children.

This year, the district will hold informational meetings for principals, teachers, classified employees and parents explaining Title IX and will conduct a self-evaluation of compliance.

In addition, programs and activities found to be noncomplying will be modified, Rottman said.

Plant Plans Near Approval

Representatives of the state Water Quality Control Board tentatively approved four of the five alterations the city of Pacifica staff has proposed for the city's sewage treatment plant.

Wayne Brown, senior water quality control engineer for the state board, said Friday he believes changes in the plant's digester sampling ports, access manholes, grease and scum baffle and scum storage system will qualify for state and federal funding.

Brown said he is not sure whether a fifth item, a modification in the plant's automatic sludge pumping system, would be fundable.

Two other changes — modifications in the plant's digester capacity and centrifuge system — were not discussed at the meeting. Consoer, Townsend & Associates, the company designing the plant, is compiling data for these two proposed alterations, according to Stephen Street, director of Community Development and Services.

State and federal funds pay 87 1/2 per cent of the cost of all changes which are approved by the WQCB. The seven changes proposed for the Pacifica plant could cost up to $300,000.

Councilman Nick Gust and some local citizens have charged that Consoer, Townsend & Associates are responsible for problems with the long-troubled treatment plant.

That firm designed the city's primary treatment plant, which has been plagued with problems for the past four years that included a pungent odor. CT&A now is building the secondary treatment plant.

A new plant operator, Bill McDonald, suggested the seven modifications when he assured his post in February.

Street said the four proposed changes that appear destined for funding approval will be processed as regular change orders for the plant as soon as CT&A completes the design specifications for them. The city council must approve the change orders before they are forwarded to the WQCB.

As soon as design work is completed on the questionable item, the sludge pumping system, its specifications will be sent to the state board's evaluation section. The council will have a clear idea on whether the sludge pumping system qualifies for state and federal funds before it approves a change order, Street said.

He added that the visiting board representatives were "pretty confident" that the fifth change would qualify for funding.

Help Wanted

The following agencies have requested volunteer assistance from the Volunteer Bureau / Voluntary Action Center of San Mateo County, with offices in Daly City, Redwood City and Burlingame.

The local telephone number for area residents is 992-0957, an answering service. Residents may also contact the main office in Burlingame at 342-0801, from 9 to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday.

FRIENDS TO TEEN-AGE PARENTS — Volunteers are needed to assist and befriend isolated and inexperienced young people in the difficult task of parenting. Volunteers will work on a one-to-one basis to help young parents assume control of their own lives and help provide a healthy growing atmosphere for the child. Training is provided and will begin Sept. 26 in the evening. Volunteers are needed throughout Northern San Mateo County.

INFORMATION AND REFERRAL — Assistance is needed to answer the telephone and take messages in the Pacifica office. This may be done anytime between 9 and 4, Monday through Friday.

PLANNED PARENTHOOD — Orientation and training for new and interested volunteers will begin Sept. 27 in the morning. Volunteers are needed in the Pacifica and San Mateo clinics as family planning counselors, clinicians and receptionists. Bilingual volunteers are especially needed although this is not necessary. An interview is required prior to the training.

SUICIDE PREVENTION AND CRISIS CENTER — Volunteers are needed to staff the 24-hour crisis line. Complete training is provided and will begin Sept. 24 and continue for four additional Saturdays. Interviews are required prior to the training.

SOUTH SAN FRANCISCO SCHOOL DISTRICT — Volunteer tutors are needed on a one-to-one basis for a special program in remedial reading for grades 1-6. Volunteers will be trained to use the special materials and are asked to make a commitment of three times per week, the time is flexible. Interviews will be made in Daly City by appointment only.

Bruno Accepts U.S. Drought Cash

A sharply divided San Bruno City Council voted Monday to accept a $261,622 combination grant and loan drought-relief package that had been questioned on moral grounds.

Councilwoman Marge Kozkowski — who was on vacation when the council deadlocked on the issue three weeks ago — was placed in the sensitive position of casting the deciding vote.

At first, she joined councilmen John Barnard and Dick Griffith in voting against accepting the package.

But, she cast a not-very-firm "yes" when Councilman Tony Governale suggested accepting the package and returning the loan within 30 days, making the final vote 3-2.

San Bruno was one of 18 cities in Northern California approved by the federal Economic Development Administration to receive such a package for water conservation projects. The method of providing the funds was the bone of contention that stalemated the council.

It was explained that the grant of $52,324 was tied to the loan and the city couldn't get one without the other.

City Engineer Leo Van Dusen said that the grant would yield $20,800 to hire four persons at $5 an hour for six months to monitor and enforce water conservation and about $32,000 for a pump station at the San Bruno Avenue water tank — two projects the city has not previously budgeted.

However, the loan portion — with a 5 per cent interest rate — would be provided on the basis of four projects already completed or underway, with city funds already earmarked.

Van Dusen had proposed placing the loan in the bank to accumulate 5 per cent interest or more for the city and repay it to the federal government after about a year, possibly making money on the procedure.

It was the only way, he explained, the city could get the lesser amount of grant money.

Governale and Mondfrans had said it would be foolish to reject $52,324 in no-strings-attached grant money, while Griffith and Barnard argued that the city didn't really need the money and would only be contributing to a morally questionable method of dispensing funds.

The EDA provided the council with an extension until today, so Mrs. Kozkowski could break the tie. Mondfrans called it a "sound way to deal."

"We're entitled to our piece of the pie," he related. Governale noted that the city's residents pay taxes to the federal government every year and that this was one way to get something in return.

"You would be doing an injustice to your own citizens to not accept this money," he said. "There's nothing immoral about taking this money."

Barnard, however, said what appears to be "free money" might not necessarily be free. It's a shame, he added, that the federal government has such a lenient system for distributing funds.

Mrs. Kozkowski, at first, firmly said she doesn't like federal programs of any kind. Federal money, she said, always has strings attached somewhere. She also questioned if the two projects scheduled for grant money could be accomplished through revenue sharing funds.

Observing that the fifth council member apparently had made up her mind, Governale called for the question and the votes were cast, rejecting the package.

Governale then offered his compromise. By returning the loan in 30 days or less, there would be no long-term commitment by the city and no chance for the city to make any substantial amount of money.

At first, Mrs. Kozkowski offered no vote at all.

"I don't believe in these shenanigans," she said.

Pushed by Mayor Mondfrans, she questioned if the city engineering department could have the paperwork together to process the loan in 30 days or less. If they can do it, then "fantastic," she said, and cast her vote in support.

City Manager Gerald Minford later said the city will break even or, perhaps, make a small amount on the loan in that one-month period.

The bureau-sponsored tests showed that fires originating in bedrooms behind closed doors developed untenable conditions before a detector in the hallway outside the door issued a warning. Therefore, NBS suggests an additional smoke detector be installed in the bedroom if persons sleeping behind closed doors are incapacitated, are smokers, or have heat-producing appliances or other ignition sources in the room.

NBS suggests heat detectors may be a useful addition to smoke detectors particularly in such places as kitchens, attics, other closed-off spaces and attached garages when a total protection system is desired.

However, NBS does not recommend the use of heat detectors alone for residential fire. In the field tests, heat detectors either failed to respond to a majority of fires.

Ms. Garrison sustained a broken arm in the accident. She was treated at Kaiser Hospital in South San Francisco and released. Santellan, who apparently had no injuries, was arrested and charged with vehicular manslaughter.

Pacificia police are continuing their investigation of the accident.

Millbrae's Planning Commission last week approved an amendment to a use permit for the El Rancho Inn to allow the hotel to build 75 additional rooms.

The commissioners postponed action, however, on the architectural and landscaping plan for the addition, noting that they want to see changes in the landscaping and layout of the parking lot. That plan will be reviewed again at the next commission meeting.

After a long discussion, the commissioners voted to set a public hearing Oct. 4 for a project to build handball and racquetball courts at 979 Broadway, the former Value Giant store. The applicants seeking a conditional use permit at that site expressed concern at the delay and hinted they might withdraw their application.

The Golden Gate Bridge is the second longest suspension bridge in the world.

Sanchez of 404 Inverness Drive, Pacifica, was booked on charges of felony assault and battery on a police officer and interfering with a police officer.

Police also claim the 15-year-old kicked out a rear side window of the police vehicle in which he was placed.

Officer Brennan suffered a chipped bone on a finger, a cut in his mouth and numerous contusions and bruises. Sgt. Hillman left the incident with a wounded right arm. Their uniforms were torn, watches shattered and Hillman's glasses were broken.

As more local police units arrived on the scene and saw the crowd, they radioed for county-wide assistance. Pacifica Police Chief Mel Nelson said officers used a chemical spray to subdue the three youths.

They arrested all three, charging the 15-year-old with drunken driving and assault on a police officer and the 17-year-old with interfering with a police officer.

Police said the 15-year-old boy driving the car was verbally abusive and resisted violently when Hillman tried to make him get out of the car.

When Officer Brennan arrived on the scene, the two officers had difficulty subduing the youth, police said. The boy allegedly struck Brennan in the lower lip with his fist. A crowd of curious neighbors gathered as a 20-year-old man allegedly jumped Officer Brennan and struck it at the intersection of Inverness Drive and Glen-court Way in Pacifica.
